Cuba's New President.
Showy, Futile Battleships.
We Need More Money.
Hearing by Finger Tips.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

CUBA HAS a new president, sworn in yesterday, a professor at the University of Havana, named Ramon Grau San Martin.

Washington would have preferred the return of the quickly deposed President de Cespedes, but hopes Prof. Grau San Martin will be a success and that everything in the way of intervention by the United States will be unnecessary.

MEANWHILE our warships are still in Cuban waters, the latest to arrive being our impressive battleship Mississippi, with heavy guns, tall turrets and big crew.

These ships seem important, when you are only warning a much smaller power that you MAY possibly do something. But the sending of ships is exactly what this country would NOT do if it were a real war.

In a real war even a little country, possessing three or four submarines and a few airplanes, could send those ships of ours to the bottom, sunk by bombs from above and torpedoes from below.

It is almost unbelievable that this nation at the moment should be spending seventy millions dollars of public money renovating battleships that would have to be hidden away if real war came.

MR. WALLACE, secretary of agriculture, says:

"Farmers are likely to get impatient within the next three months, and demand a strong dose of inflation."

This demand, he says, will be based on "the disparity between a farmer's income and what he has to pay at the store for the things he buys."

W. R. HEARST, in all of his newspapers yesterday, said:

"Reasonable inflation seems to be the next and a necessary step. We have had practically no inflation (in fact, no reflation) toward the point where the circulating medium was before the depression.

"There is less actual currency in circulation today than there was before the debacle of 1929 and the subsequent deflation.

"And, of course, there is immensely less bank deposit currency in circulation."

PEOPLE ARE beginning to wonder what idea, if any, the government had in mind when it took the United States off the gold basis, knocking down the purchasing power of the dollar, and doing NOTHING to make dollars more plentiful, on the contrary, doing many things to make them less plentiful.

IF THE "teletactor," latest production of science, is a success, those now deaf may hear through the nerves in the tips of their fingers.

Those nerves, as everybody knows by experience, are intensely sensitive, and with the aid of the new machine, they might be used as "substitute ears."

Amplification by the teletactor of variations of sound, it is hoped, will enable those totally deaf to hear again. It is still a matter of experiment.

The amplifying apparatus of the teletactor "has increased the upper limit of sound frequencies from 2,700 to 8,192 double vibrations a second."

PROF. EINSTEIN, hitherto distinguished as an ardent pacifist, has changed his mind since the Nazi developments, and urges Belgium to arm against German threats. To a friend he writes:

"You will be astonished at what I am going to tell you, but today we are in the presence of entirely different circumstances."

Prof. Einstein says he still hopes to see men refuse military service, but in view of Germany's conduct, he is not quite ready for that yet. Circumstances do alter cases, and it makes a difference whose ox is gored.

CARNERA, the Italian giant, heavyweight champion prize fighter of the world, lifted a "sedan" automobile lying on its side. He lifted the automobile back onto its four wheels without apparent effort and went his way.

On such an incident as this, in ancient days, but without the automobile, another legend of a Samson or other giant might develop. To follow the growth of these legends, as human imagination and rumor build them up, is interesting.

See for many instances "A History of the Warfare of Science With Theology in Christendom," by Andrew D. White, the late president of Cornell University, published by Appleton & Co.

TODAY MAINE votes on prohibition, state No. 26, twenty-five having all voted for repeal.

Old Neal Dow himself probably would vote to take prohibition, bootlegging, kidnaping and organized crime out of the Constitution.

Like millions of other sincere temperance advocates, he would not favor persistence in a form of fanaticism that costs this country, as the government testifies, thirteen thousand million dollars a year for its crime bill.

IN MEXICO Col. Adalberto Tejeda, who will run for president in the next election, if elected, would "place under state control all railways, transport companies and hydro-electric plants, and all means of communication."

He would also "immediately recognize all the workers' associations as state institutions." Once, such talk would have made this conservative nation shudder, but not since NRA.

BALLOONISTS FOUND IN CANADA

Van Orman, Trotter, Both Ill, Wild With Joy at Rescue

SUDBURY, Ont., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Ward T. Van Orman and Frank A. Trotter, American balloonists who participated in the James Gordon Bennet cup race from Chicago and who had been missing more than a week, were found today between Sudbury and Abitibi Canyon in Northern Ontario. They were ill from the hardships they had undergone in the bush country.

In order that the outside world might learn of their plight the two balloonists cut down a telephone pole, knowing that repairmen would be sent out to fix the damage. They attached to the pole the following note:

"This telephone pole was cut September 10 by United States Goodyear balloon team of W. T. Van Orman and Frank Trotter in the hope that repairmen would aid us in getting to civilization from here. We will continue south along the high voltage line. Please come after us. We have a gun and some food, but are both sick evidently from ptomaine poisoning. Fire your gun three times and we will answer. Please hurry. F. A. Trotter."

WILD WITH JOY

Patrolman James Barrett was sent out this morning to determine what was wrong with the telephone line. When he saw the note he did not stop to repair the damage but proceeded with the search.

Barrett found the balloonists in a camp at Tower No. 38, a lineman's outpost, about five miles from where he discovered the note. He gave them such food as he had and returned to repair the line.

Both Van Orman and Trotter were in bad shape, Barrett reported to the head office of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Company in Sudbury. Their clothing was cut to ribbons and the soles of their shoes were worn through Barrett said:

"I never saw men in my life who were so glad to see another human being as they were. They hollered with glee and hugged and kissed me as soon as they me."

Arrangements were started to provide the ballonists with food and other necessaries and to get them to the Canadian National Railways in the vicinity of LaForest Station as quickly as possible.

The information received here was that the balloon landed in the Temagami Forest Reserve Sunday, September 3. The balloonists were not sure of the exact time, but estimated that it was about 4 p. m.

DRY MAINE VOTES ON REPEAL

Nation Watches for Outcome of Balloting

Associated Press.

Maine, dry for more than 75 years, drew the attention of the whole nation today as she balloted on the proposal to wipe prohibition from the national constitution.

Twenty-five other states had voted previously and all approved repeal. Tomorrow Colorado, Minnesota and Maryland will have their turn at the ballot boxes.

PORTLAND, Me., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Maine's polling booths opened today for a vote on repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment which most observers looked upon as a preliminary skirmish in a fight by repealists to wipe the state bone dry laws from the Constitution.

Heavy balloting in the cities marked the early voting. Ward workers said the preponderance of voting appeared to be for the delegates pledged for repeal.

Anti-repeal leaders were not hesitant in saying they saw a possible threat to the more than 75 years of state prohibition in the event Maine today should join the 25 other states which already

RESCUE WORKERS BRINGING ONE OF THE VICTIMS FROM THE BARKING MINE SHAFT TODAY

TWO EXPLOSIONS ROCK BARKING PLANT NEAR NEW KENSINGTON

Seven miners were killed, one was injured and 300 or more escaped when two explosions rocked the Barking mine of the Hillman Coal and Coke Company near New Kensington today.

The miners were trapped 80 feet beneath the surface and three miles from the mouth of the mine when the blasts, 20 minutes apart, shook the section in which they were working.

The other 300, hearing the rumblings of the explosion, ran up a long slope to the surface. Many of them were knocked down by the force of the blast but not hurt.

Various explanations were given for the blast. One was that a motor in section West Six, had exploded. Another said the blast was due to an accumulation of gas.

WIVES AT PIT MOUTH

As the 300 rushed to the surface they were met by wives and children whose fears gave way in many cases to tears of relief.

The seven victims, five of them married, were dead when brought to the surface by other miners. The Rev. Joseph A. Mitsch, of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in New Kensington, awaited them in the small lamp house a few paces from the mine mouth to administer the last rites of the church. But it was too late.

The dead are:

FRANCONI, JOSEPH, 22, Springdale.
STOPKO, MICHAEL, 35, Arnold.
SOLOMON, CHARLES, 47, New Kensington.
DUBLINSKY, JOSEPH, 33, Valley Heights.
TUSING, GREELEY, 39, New Kensington.
RUBEN, CONDRAT, 41, Springdale.

BLAST DESCRIBED

"We entered the mine about 6:30 on the day shift. We had been working about two hours.

"I heard two explosions, one about 8:30 and the other about 20 minutes later. I was about 200 feet away and started for the scene of the blast. It took us 20 minutes to get there.

"The men were laying in mudholes covered with coal. They were all dead. I helped take the bodies out.

"The first blast nearly broke my eardrums. The second knocked me off my feet, but I was not hurt."

John Roche, boss timberman, explained:

"They probably hit a gas feeder."

The one injured miner, Joseph Payer, 23, of Springdale, was rushed to Citizens General Hospital in New Kensington. Burned on the hands and face, his condition was regarded as not serious.

2 SECTIONS SWEPT

CUBA'S REGIME FACES CHAOS

Associated Press.

HAVANA, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Cuba's fourth government in a month rode in the saddle today, with a 48-year-old former professor at the reins, and the going was none too easy.

No sooner had Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin, chosen president by a junta which assumed control only last Monday, pledged himself to "fulfill entirely the revolutionary program" than 300 former army officers demanded he step aside in favor of Carlos Manuel de Cespedes, whose brief regime began a month ago.

DISQUIETING REPORTS

In Santiago there were disquieting reports that heavily armed bands roamed the countryside ready for revolution in behalf of former President Mario G. Menocal, that unrest led merchants to close their stores, and that army officers refused to return to their duties.

And in Havana's Central Park 5,000 persons met to hear agitators decry the newest govern-

ZIEFEL, COUNTY AIDE, DIES

William H. Ziefel, 66, former chief clerk to the County Commissioners under the Armstrong-Babcock regime, died today in his home, 116 Jefferson drive, Mt. Lebanon.

He had been stricken seriously ill while at his home at Buckeye Lake, O., a month ago and taken to Bethesda Hospital, Zanesville, O. He had shown improvement and was brought home recently.

Ziefel was adjudged guilty of conspiracy to divert gasoline for which the county paid to his own use by Judge Sylvester J. Snee May 13, along with Howard Allen, former superintendent of the County Bureau of Motor Vehicles.

They were refused a new trial August 3. Sentence was withheld pending an appeal to higher courts.

Second Registration Day Tomorrow

Registrars will be at every polling place in the city of Pittsburgh tomorrow so that voters may register for the primary Tuesday, September 19, and the general elections in November.

The registration booths will be open from 8 to 11 in the morning, from 5 o'clock to 11 in the evening.

Pirate Double Bill, Fights Called Off

Rain today caused postponement of the doubleheader between the Pirates and Dodgers at Forbes Field and the cancellation of the final professional boxing show of the outdoor season, scheduled at Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight.

The Pirates and Dodgers will play two games tomorrow, but the boxing card has been canceled.

1,500 on Strike Charge Cleaners Violated Code

Striking cleaners and dyers in the Pittsburgh district were picketing 40 cleaning plants today as union leaders and strikers' representatives charged employers, most of whom fly the Blue Eagle, with violation of the NRA code.

According to Selig Morov, president of Local 18300, Cleaners' and Dyers' Union, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, the strikers number more than 1,500. Shorter working hours, increases wages and union recognition are demanded. Morov said:

"Some establishments have been paying as low as $6 a week and working as long as 60 hours a week. We want to equalize wages throughout the industry."

Referring to a statement purported to have been made last night by W. J. Mooney, chairman of the stabilization committee of the Cleaners' and Dyers' Association of Western Pennsylvania, principal employers' group here, that only a minority of employes seemed to be present at the strike meeting yesterday, Nathan Weiner, union treasurer and chairman of the strike committee, said:

"About 25 plants are closed now. The remaining 15 or 16 we expect to be closed tomorrow."

Strikers' representatives, meeting in Moose Temple at noon today, were addressed by W. J. Kelly, A. F. of L. organizer, and George Siebert, also of the A. F. of L.

5 Armed 'Guests' Loot Coney Hotel

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—A few hours after they had registered in as "guests," five men armed with sawed-off shot guns and revolvers bound and gagged three employes of the Half Moon Hotel at Coney Island and escaped with $384 in cash and other loot.

The quintet, believed to be members of Brooklyn's hair-trigger "rifle gang," entered the hotel shortly after midnight.

4,000 MINERS GO ON STRIKE

JEANNETTE, Pa., Sept. 11.—More than 4,000 miners in western Westmoreland County staged a general walkout this morning.

Representatives from Herminie No. 1, Herminie No. 2, Keystone Shaft, Rillton, Hutchinson, Export, McCullough, Whyel, Yukon, Adams and Biddle mines, attended a meeting held at Herminie No. 1 this morning.

A meeting of Districts 3, 4 and 5, United Mine Workers of America, has been called for Wednesday at Pricedale. This will effect 60,000 miners.

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Unless the bituminous coal code is signed by tomorrow, another strike is threatened Wednesday in Southwestern Pennsylvania mines, scene of violence last month.

Martin F. Ryan, insurgent union leader who was an active figure in the August walkout, in which one striker was killed, told two mass meetings yesterday the time has come for a "showdown" between the U. M. W. A. and the operators.

At the Mather mine in Greene County, with an employe list of 900, workers decided to quit today.

Johnson Fights For Coal Code, Operators Balk

Summary of Coal Operators' Objections to NRA Coal Code on Page 4.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11. —(AP.)—Fresh efforts to harmonize conflicting views of bituminous coal operators on their code of fair competition are under way at the recovery administration.

Various groups of producers will meet Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, to talk over their objections to the code he proposed.

Negotiations on union labor contracts in the long non-union Appalachian region were resumed today, but both operators and miners declined to discuss them. Johnson said however, they were going forward toward an agreement.

School Feature Back In Sun-Telegraph

"PICTORIAL EDUCATION," the students' friend, is back in the Sun-Telegraph. This educational feature, so popular last year with students and teachers alike, will appear every week day in its familiar position.

It will be edited, as it was last year, by Mrs. Mary de Salardi.

Publication of this feature grew out of the need of pupils in city, county and parochial schools for easily accessible pictures with which to illustrate compositions assigned them for home work.

Difficulty in readily obtaining such pictures as "Signing of the Treaty of Ghent" led some of the pupils into clipping books and magazines which shouldn't have been mutilated.

The Sun-Telegraph, by taking this work on its own shoulders has provided this feature with its illustrations and authentic text to make readily available all the needs of these pupils—and all of this is approved by the city, county and parochial school authorities.

Every parent who has wondered what became of his favorite magazine, which heretofore may have been appropriated for its illustrations, may now breathe a sigh of relief because it is no longer desirable to so use such publications.

These pictures in the Sun-Telegraph are synchronized to appear at almost the same time they are under study in the schools.

To all Allegheny County pupils it may not be premature to say there may be more material reward than the thought of a good job well done if they are careful to prepare first-class note books of their visual education home work.

Ford Hides in Trailer, Eludes NRA Quiz

DETROIT, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Henry Ford, sun-tanned from a three weeks' north woods vacation, came back to his Dearborn offices today while residents of Big Bay, Mich., near the Ford summer camp, chuckled over the revelation that Ford, eluding interviewers and keeping his departure secret, had ridden away beneath canvas in an automobile trailer.

Officials of the Ford Motor Company said the motor magnate coming to his office this morning, indicated he would continue his policy of refusing comment on the NRA automobile code which he has not signed. They said there probably would be no forthcoming statement on the company's position, "unless Mr. Ford changes his mind."

Up in Big Bay, more than 500 miles to the north in the state's Upper Peninsula, a member of the exclusive Huron Mountain Lodge, where Ford and his wife spent the past three weeks, said the motor magnate had "pulled a fast one" on questioners in departing Saturday noon.

Ford, the member said, concealed himself under a canvas covering in an automobile trailer attached to his automobile and rode out of the camp gates and through Big Bay, six miles away, where several would-be interviewers were stationed. The road in that section is extremely rough.

It was indicated at the Ford Company plant here that the manufacturer has not changed his position regarding the NRA code, which, it was learned last week from an authoritative source, is that his signature to the code is unnecessary, as long as all the terms are complied with.

CITIZEN LEAGUE DECLARES ITSELF FOE TO MELLON POLITICS

'LAUGHED OFF' BY BANKER, HEAD SAYS

Assail Mackrell Reply To Engelsberg as 'Evasive'

Denying any connection with W. L. Mellon, Senator James J. Coyne or Republican State Chairman Edward Martin, the Citizens' League today declared itself unalterably opposed to the political principles of Mellon as carried out by Coyne and Mayor John S. Herron.

Leslie M. Johnston, chairman of the league, said that in 1931 a member of the Citizens' Committee asked Mellon to use his powerful influence to back decent men for office in Allegheny County. Johnston said:

"The representative of the committee was quietly laughed off by Mr. Mellon."

Johnston's statement was in response to the charge Saturday by Register of Wills Joseph N. Mackrell that the Citizens' League, backing Councilman P. J. McArdle for the Republican Mayoralty nomination, was linked with Mellon and Coyne to bring about the nomination of Mayor John S. Herron.

OLITICAL HISTORY"

Mackrell's charge was incorporated in a general denial of correspondence made public by the League in which Joseph Engelsberg, Hill district character, contended that Mackrell had been associated with him in the illicit liquor business many years ago.

Johnston recounted political history of last winter when his group had demanded that State Chairman Martin force Coyne to support legislation in Harrisburg supported by the Citizens' Committee, notably city manager legislation. A representative of the committee also visited Mellon at that time, and received no assistance it asked.

The league today reiterated its support of charges made by Engelsberg and John Douglas against Mackrell.

Terming Mackrell's public denial "evasive," the league, in a statement signed by Leslie M. Johnson, chairman, submitted the findings of a committee which investigated the charge that Mackrell paid Douglas $35,000 to withdraw as mayoralty candidate against him in 1921, and that he was associated with the "rackets."

Dr. J. P. Kerr appeared before the committee in 1921 in support of the same charge and Mackrell refused to appear, according to the statement.

The committee, composed of Dr. R. E. Brenneman, Albert H. Horen, Walter H. Demmler, William E. Schoyer, James H. Gray, W. A. Avey and W. H. Stevenson, found, according to the statement:

"It is incontestably true that Joseph Engelsberg paid $30,000 in cash and later that $5,000 in United States Liberty bonds were delivered in a certain office for or on account of John Douglas, Jr., upon the sole consideration that John Douglas, Jr., would retire as a candidate for Mayor in favor of Joseph N. Mackrell, which he subsequently did . . .

"From the statements of witnesses and the proofs submitted to us, we are satisfied Mr. Mackrell is intimately associated with men who are in the liquor business; that the money paid to accomplish the withdrawal of Mr. Douglas came from such men who are very actively supporting Mr. Mackrell for Mayor. We, therefore, are fully persuaded that Dr. Kerr's charges that candidate Mackrell was associated with Joseph Engelsberg, under charges of violating the liquor law, are true."

'NEW-SYSTEM' LOTTERY

In support of Engelsberg's charge that Mackrell was connected with the "New System" lottery, the report claimed court records show that Archibald Mackrell, father of Joseph N. Mackrell, became surety on two bonds for Engelsberg before Alderman J. J. Kirby on informations for conspiracy and for conducting a lottery, and both in connection with the "New System."

URGES NEW DRY ORGANIZATION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—One strong prohibition organization making a determined drive for a new, but different, prohibition amendment to the Constitution was advocated today in a letter from Deets Pickett, research secretary for the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to weekly church papers.

Pickett frankly expressed the belief that the Eighteenth Amendment will be repealed, attributing a part of the difficulties of the dry forces to lack of funds for carrying on campaigns in the states; failure of the federal government to properly enforce the dry laws and to "an unfavorable press and the constant warfare of such agencies as the theater and the magazines."

CUBAN REGIME FACES UNREST

ment as lending itself to "machinations of Wall street's financiers," shout, "Down with Yankee imperialism!" and demand the withdrawal of United States warships from Cuban waters.

Banners carried by Communists demanded that American Marines "leave Cuban waters" and advocated "death to Sumner Welles," United States ambassador.

Although Havana generally received the new government dispassionately, unrest continued in the interior.

Two men, one an army sergeant, were arrested for conspiracy in Marianao, near here. In Oriente Province rebels were reported in the field. They were said to be Menocal supporters.

The Havana officers, loyal to Dr. de Cespedes, who gave way before an enlisted men's coup last Monday, demanded his return, but indicated that whether he continue in office or resign shortly after his re-installation was for him to decide.

Dr. Grau San Martin, a lanky surgeon, who has had few direct political connections, received the demands from Col. Horacio Ferrer, de Cespedes' Secretary of War, and announced he would answer them some time today.

The offificers also asked that Sergio Carbo, publisher and junta member, and all leaders of the army and navy "mutiny" be returned to civil life.

U. S. Delays Recognizing New Cuban Government

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt let it be known today that his attitude toward the new Cuban government headed by Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin depends on whether it has the support of the people there.

While keeping the strong Navy forces rimmed about the island in readiness to protect American lives in event of outbreaks there, it was said at the White House that the President is ready to support that government in Cuba which is the choice of the people and can maintain order. So the present attitude remains one of watchfulness.

If the new President and his forces are able to keep order, it appears that the Roosevelt administration will not hesitate to proffer recognition. There is no certainty that this test has been met yet, however.

It was re-emphasized that the administration has no intention of intervention if it can possibly be avoided.

DELEGATION CALLS

A delegation headed by William Simons, national secretary of the Anti-Imperialist League of the United States, went to the White House to protest against intervention and against the sending of warships to the island.

The group was received by Louis M. Howe, secretary to the President, who outlined the President's policy. He said the warship's were sent to the island simply for the protection of American lives, without thought of armed intervention.

Later, Secretary Hull indicated that the United States would recognize the present government as soon as it had demonstrated it could maintain order.

The Secretary of State told reporters recognition had not been taken up formally, as the hour for such consideration had not yet arrived, due to the newness of the Dr. Ramon Grau San Martin regime.

CUBANS CHARGE U. S. PLOT

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Senator Alfredo Palacios said today he had received a message, signed "The Cuban University Student Board," which declared:

"The United States Ambassador is meeting in the National Hotel with 300 former officers and is instigating a disturbance so debarkation of Yankee sailors will be provoked."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Secretary Hull today denied reports circulated in foreign newspapers charging that Ambassador Welles has plotted with disgruntled Cuban army officers at the Hotel National in Havana.

At a press conference, he read a statement from Welles which said:

"I have never spoken to any of the army officers in the hotel individually or in assembly.

"I moved to the National Hotel because my lease expired and I expected to sail on September 14 to the United States. There were no Cuban officers in the hotel when I moved there."

How to Pronounce Name of Cuban President

BOOES TURNED INTO VOTES --HERRON

Mayor Claims League Backed Him With Sample Ballots

The League of Women Voters gave him a majority of hisses and boos, but also gave him most of its sample votes, Mayor John S. Herron told a group of partisans at the noon-time meeting in Regular Republican headquarters today. He said:

"Friday when I attended the dinner of the League of Women Voters I was hissed and booed. I was not the least bit surprised because the League of Women Voters had thrown its doors open and permitted the rival factions to pour in.

"I do not hold the officers of the league responsible. The friends of this administration who were present gave respectful hearings to other candidates in the face of the gravest accusations.

"Our friends must have been in the majority, because the tabulation taken from the voting machine placed in the hotel for demonstration purposes showed that I led the ticket in the voting for Mayor."

The actual tabulation showed 59 votes for Herron, 51 for Mackrell, 15 for McArdle.

There was no restriction on the number of times any one person could vote on the sample machine.

COURT RULING

While the State Supreme Court ruled the constitutional convention on repeal must be a deliberative body truly representative of the people, there was no assurance it necessarily would be representative of the people's will by today's vote.

Eighty delegates will be chosen from the 16 counties. Listed without designation as to their belief on repeal or retention, the names of four of 26 delegates appear alphabetically on the ballots of the various counties.

A majority in each county will decide whether wet or dry delegates will represent the county, but the possibility existed that by a close vote the state majority might be for repeal and the convention delegation or opposite tenet, or vice versa.

Roosevelt Wants Repeal Hastened, Farley Says

BALTIMORE, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Postmaster General Farley said today that President Roosevelt was eager for prohibition to be repealed "at the earliest possible moment."

In his address before the Young People's Democratic League of Maryland, he predicted Maine would join the repeal column today and Maryland tomorrow.

Farley said:

"Today repeal and its early accomplishment is an inseparable part of the great national industrial recovery program of the man who stood squarely on that platform and was swept to a glorious triumph at the polls—President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"I had an opportunity to discuss this question with the President a few days ago. Not only was he pleased over the rapidity with which the states are accomplishing ratification, but he is eager that we finish the task at the earliest possible moment so that in planning the national budget for the next and succeeding years he can estimate the proper return to the national treasury of revenues from legitimate alcoholic beverages."

M'NAIR CHARGES VOTE COERCION ON HILL

Democrats Ordered to Register Republican Or Lose Relief

William N. McNair, Democratic candidate for mayor, today charged before the Registration Commissioners, that Hill District Negroes had been threatened with removal from the Welfare lists for registering Democratic last Thursday.

John K. Morrow, chairman of the Registration Board, ordered a hearing of the charges tonight and summoned registrars of the Seventeenth District, Fifth Ward, to appear.

COMPLAINTS FILED

McNair and Robert L. Vann, Negro, assistant United States attorney general, complained that ceveral Negroes had changed their party affiliation under coercion and that nearly 50 others had been told they would be "off welfare" unless they switched to the Republican party.

McNair stated that in several instances he had been informed voters, after registering Democratic, had returned to the polling place in a county garage at 361 Soho street accompanied by a policeman. That changes of affiliation had been made was indicated by an inspection of the registration records, Mrs. Mary Jane Clark, a member of the commission, stated.

CHANGES ILLEGAL

Chairman Morrow declared:

"A change in registration is allowed only by court orders. Otherwise the voter must wait until next year to change his party affiliation."

In a statement from the McNair headquarters, the candidate was quoted as also charging that the city administration was threatening to take homes from delinquent taxpayers and to remove from payroll relatives of others who had signified their intention of registering Democratic.

INITIALED TAX RECEIPTS VALID

The Board of Registration Commissioners today ruled that several thousand persons holding tax receipts bearing initials of clerks of the County Treasurer's office would be entitled to register tomorrow or Saturday.

The board previously had instructed registrars to refuse to honor such tax receipts on the ground that receipts initialed instead of signed in full were null. The County Solicitor's office advised that the receipts were valid.

This afternoon two score Chinese, refused the right to register in the First Ward last Thursday, unless they could show birth certificates, were to be heard by the registration board. The Chinese assert they have registered in previous elections.

MARGARET McCARTHY

AUTO HELD CLUE IN GIRL SLAYING

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—State detectives joined with local authorities today in attempting to run down the first tangible clue in the slaying of Margaret (Peggy) McCarthy, 10, who was found strangled to death Saturday.

The girl disappeared Friday after leaving her Somerville home on an errand. Her body was found in a clump of bushes near the Harvard Divinity School the following day.

Paul T. Murphy, 17-year-old Cambridge High School student, gave police their first footing in the case last night when he told of seeing a car slow down early Saturday morning near the spot where the child's body was found. He said he remembered the first three numbers on the registration plates.

Meanwhile search went on for a middle-aged man who was seen talking to the child a short time before she disappeared.

FATAL WRECK CHARGES DUE

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—District Attorney Frank L. Wooster indicated today he might call a special grand jury to "consider criminal aspects" of the Erie train wreck here last Tuesday night in which 14 persons were killed. He said:

"Whether I shall seek a special grand jury investigation will be determined entirely by the evidence which is brought out at the coroner's inquest tomorrow."

NURSE GRILLED IN SLAYING OF CAPITALIST

Connellsville Girl Admits Shooting; Denies Romance

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—From a 43-year-old nurse, who police said admitted "trailing" Francis Joseph Morgan Grace, Sr., 57, retired capitalist, until she killed him, authorities here today sought a motive for the slaying.

The nurse, Miss Frida Wilhelmina Augusta Weltz, accused of shooting Grace in the garden of his summer home Saturday night, refused to give a reason for the slaying, District Attorney Frank Murphy said.

Miss Weltz was registered with the San Francisco County Nurses' Association as a daughter of Mrs. Ida Weltz, of Connellsville, Pa.

Murphy said Miss Weltz, who was discharged by Grace as his nurse 18 months ago, admitted she had planned to kill him since that time. The district attorney quoted her:

"I had good and sufficient reasons to kill him, but I wouldn't tell the reasons to my most intimate friend."

Miss Weltz asserted, Murphy said, there was "no romance involved" and added the "real reason would probably seem trivial to you."

Grace was a nephew of the late W. R. Grace, founder of the exporting and importing concern and shipping line.

Mrs. Grace, a partial invalid, arrived with the housekeeper, Mrs. Ellen Keller, from a shopping tour in San Francisco shortly after the tragedy. She was placed under the care of a physician.

Nurse Left Connellsville In '23, Says Mother

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Sept. 11.—Frieda Agusta Weltz, the nurse held in Santa Cruz for the killing of F. J. M. Grace, shipping magnate, was born in Connellsville, her mother, Mrs. Ida Weltz, said today.

Mrs. Weltz said she knew nothing of her daughter's association with Grace until she read newspaper accounts of the slaying. Her daughter, she said, has been in California since 1923 and has written only infrequent, sketchy letters.

Nurse Weltz attended school here. She was graduated from the Kensington School for Nursing, Philadelpha, and served in the Monongahela and Connellsville State hospitals. She served 13 months in France as a Red Cross nurse during the World War.

William F. Weltz, to whom the nurse addressed a letter at "New Kensington, Pa.," now is living in Connellsville. He is her brother.

Only the last two of the 1933 income tax quarterly payments were made on the basis of the 1932 boost in rates.

BULLET PERILS ESTRANGED WIFE IN PARENTS' HOME

JILTED YOUTH ADMITS FIRING RIFLE

Accident Plea Wins Suspect, Friend Freedom

The story of how an estranged woman missed death by inches when a bullet whizzed by her head as she sat reading on a divan was disclosed in North Side Police Court today.

Pretty Mrs. Esther Baird, 23, living with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. McRoberts, 1924 Morrell street, testified that her reading was interrupted Saturday night when the bullet pierced the window of the parlor, went through a piano and embedded itself in the wall.

CLAIMS ACCIDENT

The bullet came from a .22 caliber rifle in the hands of her former sweetheart, David Bethel, 23, who rooms at 1921 Morrell street, opposite the McRoberts home.

Bethel testified he was demonstrating how well the rifle, which belonged to a roommate, worked, when it was accidentally discharged. He was discharged for lack of evidence by Magistrate Ray E. Schneider.

Police testified that Bethel was in a drunken stupor when seen in the crowd that gathered in front of the McRoberts home after the shooting.

FRIEND FREED

Bethel testified he was too frightened to tell what had happened at the time. He and his friend, James Miller, of Etna, were arrested yesterday after police learned a roommate of Bethel owned a gun. Miller, who corroborated Bethel's story, also was discharged.

Mrs. Baird told Magistrate Schneider she had not kept company with Bethel for six months. Since then she had been married and estranged, she said. There had been no quarrel or ill feeling between Bethel and Mrs. Baird, both testified.

SERVANT CHEAT LINKS COUPLE

Extradition papers were being prepared today for the return here from Buffalo, N. Y., of Charles P. Fitzgerald and his wife Ruth, indicted on charges of swindling servant girls by selling fake oil leases.

The two and Bertin Fitzgerald, were indicted jointly for conspiracy to defraud and the woman known as Ruth Harrallson alias Ruth Larson, individually on a charge of violating the state securities act.

Fitzgerald and his wife were released on their own recognizance, the records reveal. Mrs. Fitzgerald is charged with selling two spurious leases, one to Almeda Johnson, employed at 6200 Fifth avenue, the other to Clara Heim, employed at 6665 Bartlett street, a year ago. She was aided in the second sale by the other defendants, it is alleged.

HOTEL BLAZE ROUTS GUESTS

Fire in a kitchen ventilator at the Terminal Hotel, 615 Bigelow boulevard at 9:30 a. m. filed the building with smoke and routed a dozen persons, including guests and employes.

Firemen narrowly escaped injury when several steps in a fire escape at the rear of the building broke under their weight.

One of the proprietors, Arthur Vercesi, and his wife, Irene Vercesi, were driven out of the building by dense clouds of smoke. The blaze was discovered by C. Gland, one of the proprietors.

Along with the Coroner, a rescue car from the Bureau of Mines and three bureau inspectors under J. J. Forbes, were at the scene. Four hours after the blast Dave Ryan, superinendent of the mine, and the two inspectors, entered the mine to make a final check for bodies. Salvation Army representatives from New Kensington also were on the scene with food for the rescue workers.

About the small lamp house, where the seven bodies were taken, there was an atmosphere of tragedy. Miners' wives, pinched, during several years of little work, appeared there to be told that their husbands' lives had been snuffed out.

PROBES BEGIN

In Washington, Daniel Harrington, chief engineer of the safety division of the United States Bureau of Mines, announced that the Pittsburgh bureau was investigating thec ause. The Coroner also began an investigation.

First reports of the dead and injured were exaggerated and led to the arrival of four ambulances, which were parked just outside the mouth of the mine until rescuers determined whether any of the miners were trapped. A dozen physicians and nurses stood by.

Some of the miners were puzzled as to the location of the blast, according to Michael Simon, a miner of Renton. He said:

"After we heard the first explosion we didn't know where it came from. After the second, which knocked me down, a pit foreman came to where I was working and said, 'Let's go.' We went and found the bodies and carried them out."

Dorothy Tusing, 14-year-old daughter, one of five children, was in a state of collapse outside the mine mouth shortly after she heard of her father's death.

Joseph Dubinsky was identified by a sister, Mrs. Annie Mocea, who said that Dubinsky had returned to work just two weeks ago after being idle two years.

5-YEAR RECORD

In Harrisburg the Department of Mines announced that the explosion broke a five-year-old record in controlling the menace of gas explosions in bituminous shafts. In five years the greatest number of men killed in any one blast was three.

Walter H. Glasgow, secretary of the department, said the unusual feature of today's disaster was that no fire resulted from the explosion.

Too Many Hearts Even for Chicken

There's nothing wrong with that old gag, "Two hearts that beat as one." But they don't beat any more.

When the chicken Mrs. W. B. Gress, of 5204 Woodlawn place, had bought for her Sunday dinner lost its heart yesterday, the hearts lost their palpitations. When she cut the fowl open Mrs Gress found two hearts, one of normal size, the other slightly smaller. They were grown together and connected by an artery.

SEIZE PREACHER AS BIGAMIST

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The Rev. Walter J. Bateman, 33-year-old evangelist, is under arrest on a charge of bigamy preferred by his wife, Esther, of Toledo, O.

Dazed by the warrant was the former Louise Stumpf, of Milwaukee, who, police said, married the evangelist here after hearing his fervent sermons under the name of the Rev. Robert Warwick.

The bigamy warrant resulted when a Mrs. Fox, of Cleveland, attended evangelistic services here several days ago at the tent of Uldine Utley, famous girl evangelist.

There Mrs. Fox saw a man she recognized as Bateman. She recalled his appearance from having heard him preach years ago in Toledo. Familiar with the desertion of Mrs. Bateman in Ohio, Mrs. Fox wrote a letter to the wife and she arrived here yesterday.

Bateman said:

"Well, I guess you've got me. I just was in love and didn't stop to think about the consequences."

Many Loose Threads In Lamson Case

SAN JOSE, Cal., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Many stray threads of the trial of David A. Lamson, charged with the murder of his attractive wife, Aliene, remain to be knitted together as the defense of the young Stanford University press representative nears the end of its case.

Another unanswered question was whether the former Dolores Roberts, nurse maid in the Lamson home, would be summoned.

Miss Clara Melwitz, who also served occasionally as maid for the Lamsons and was quoted by officers as saying there had been quarrels in the home, was subpoenaed by the state, but has not been called to the stand.

'Tex' Gets Religion At Aimee's Temple

By MARIAN RHEA
International News Service.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—Texas Guinan got religion at Aimee Semple McPherson's Angelus Temple last night—also a "big hand."

She marched right up to the altar—picture hat, feather-trimmed purse, dime-sized diamonds, exotic perfume, and all—knelt down at the railing and renounced her sins while the choir sang "Come to Jesus" and the congregation echoed "Hallelujah" and "Amen."

She was welcomed with open arms, too—not only by Rheba Crawford Splivalo, once upon a time the Salvation Army's "Angel of Broadway" and now pastor pro tem in Sister Aimee's absence, but by everyone else as well.

Zealous sisters crowded around her at the altar, holding her hand, patting her shoulder, calling upon the Lord to receive unto His Bosom this new ewe lamb Brothers hovered in the background, giving thanks that another sinner had seen the light.

One little girl gave her a parcel all wrapped up in tissue paper, and when the beaming Texas opened it to find a handkerchief trimmed with tatting, she was overwhelmed. She breathed:

"Gosh, a thing like this will make a Christian out of me!"

JOHNSON FIGHTS FOR CODE ON COAL

A. Bitner, of Charleston, W. Va., district president, represented the union.

Charles O'Neill, of New York, vice president of Peale, Peacock and Kerr, and Duncan Kennedy, of Charleston, represented the operators. Both O'Neill and Kennedy are former officials in the United Mine Workers.

William Feeney, of Charleroi, Pa., district president of the United Mine Workers, today sent a plea to Fayette and Green county miners to stay on the job until the code was finished.

Many miners in the two counties have threatened to lay down their picks Wednesday unless the agreement is completed by that time. Feeney said:

"We're advising the miners to stay at work until the code is signed."

He said the move to take a "holiday" was instituted by "insurgent" minor officials in the union.

Johnson was optimistic on the outcome of negotiations both as to the code and wage scales. He said:

"From the co-operative, conciliatory and reasonable attitude now governing both sets of negotiations, I feel justified in saying that my confidence in our ability to get a proper agreed code and a satisfactory settlement has not been shaken."

CODE ATTACKED

Nearly every paragraph in the code Johnson proposed is attacked by the operators in the various sets of objections.

The Northern Coal Control Association and the Smokeless-Appalachian Coal Association, embracing operators who for years have opposed unionization of their mines, say the code is "designed for operation only in connection with union labor." They claim the code would turn over to the union and the federal government "practically all the functions of management."

They seek, too, the elimination of a provision which would permit employes to bargain for deduction of union dues from wages. They objected to the 36 hour average week. They insist that a clause permitting employers to hire, discharge and promote without regard to membership or nonmembership in the union be included. They claim the labor dispute arbitration system proposed is "peculiarly designed to drive employes into a union."

Those associations include the operators who are working on union contracts.

Alabama protests particularly against the $3 a day base wage the code proposed for that state. The operators from the far South also claim the code would foster unionization.

Western Kentucky objects to the $3.84 wage proposed for that field as too high. Illinois and Indiana producers say the Western Kentucky scale is too low.

The United Mine Workers also have objections, but they are understood to be largely technical.

Talk of a court test of the code, unless drastic changes are made, was heard among the operators yesterday. It subsided somewhat, however, with Johnson's statement.

COURT TEST

One of the Appalachian objections was taken by some coal men as a hint that the code might be taken to court. It said in part:

"The code undertakes to regulate matters which are not committed to the control of the federal government and which infringe upon the constitutional right of private contract."

A hearing on the code, as revised, has been set for 2:30 p. m. tomorrow.

The objections dealing with labor relations drew from Senator Wagner, of New York, an appeal that employers and employes "forget all feuds" and "back the President's program by submitting their disputes to the National Labor Board," of which he is chairman.

In the minds of some coal men is the thought that Johnson eventually may have to impose a code because of an inability to harmonize the many conflicting views. But Johnson is pressing relentlessly for a code by agreement.

RADIO CODE HITS REPAIR CHEATS

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Charging many owners of radios let their equipment fall in disuse "rather than fall prey to the vulturous class with which the radio service field is infested," the radio repairmen of the nation today submitted a code designed chiefly to prevent unfair practices in their profession.

Among the unfair practices cited in the code were:

Stealing good radio tubes and replacing them with damaged ones; malicious destruction of radio devices during inspection calls as a means to create service work or justify service charges; use of radio service as a means to gain access to homes for illegitimate purposes, such as buurglary, larceny, etc.;

Charging for materials not furnished; charging for services not rendered; misrepresentation of ability and training.

VATICAN-NAZI PACT RATIFIED

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Ratifications of a concordat between Germany and the Holy See were exchanged by Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state, and Dr. Eugene von Klee, councellor in the Germany embassy at Vatican City, it was announced today.

The concordat was signed a month and a half ago. Last week reports were published abroad that a failure to ratify was likely, but Vatican prelates said concordats are infrequently ratified before several months had passed.

The Pope was reported in Vatican circles as not altogether pleased with the situation in German, partly because of Chancellor Hitler's attitude towards Jews who have become Christians, but they said there were no grounds for refusing to ratify the agreement.

The sudden ratifications, particularly on Sunday, came as a surprise to both the Vacitan and the German embassy.

The action ended rumors that fundamental difficulties had arisen between the Vatican and the reich.

The Consumers' Board had asked that this provision be studied carefully because of possible consequences of such a price control policy, but Whiteside resolved not to delay the agreement.

U. S. Urged to Admit German Refugees

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The American Civil Liberties Union today asked President Roosevelt to revise existing immigration restrictions to admit religious and political refugees, particularly those from Germany.

In a memorial signed by 36 educators, lawyers, clergymen and liberals, the union urged that changes be made to meet the nation's "tradition of asylum for refugees escaping from foreign countries."

Riot Squad Rushed To Scene,—But It's a Boy

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Sept. 11.—Someone telephoned that there was trouble—maybe a shooting—at the home of Lewis Shields.

There was no trouble at all, the police were told when they got there, "and it's a boy."

So it was the riot squad that was the first to congratulate the Shields on the birth of a son.

PINCHOT TO ACT IN MILK ROW

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot, in his official capacity, today entered the rehearing on the controversial Philadelphia milk shed marketing agreement to demand a "square deal for the milk producers and consumers."

In a telegram that was read at the hearing by Special Deputy Attorney General Charles Klein, whom he named to conduct a state investigation of the profits of large dairy companies, the Governor warned that he will do his utmost to compel the dairy companies to open their books for inspection.

More than 2,000 farmers crowded the ballroom and balconies of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel for the hearing ordered by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace because of the mounting tide of protests to the new pact.

'BUY' CAMPAIGN URGED BY DAVIS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Terming the NRA the "spearhead of the recovery drive," United States Senator James J. Davis says:

"It is imperative that the consuming public make reasonable purchases at once to quicken business revival."

The Senator spoke yesterday at a rally of several thousand members of the Loyal Order of Moose, of which he is director general.

After his address, members of the organization pledged their support to the recovery program. The rally was attended by representatives of lodges in 19 Eastern Pennsylvania communities.

Rail Employment Highest Since 1932

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The Interstate Commerce Commission announced today that railroad employment reached 1,014,879 men on August 15, the first time this picture has passed the million mark since October, 1932, when it was 1,016,951.

HITLER HAILED AS NEW LUTHER

WITTENBERG, Germany, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Bishop Ludwig Mueller, of the Prussian Evangelical Church, believes Chancellor Hitler's advent to power is a reformation comparable to that of Martin Luther four centuries ago.

In a sermon commemorating the four hundred and fiftieth anniversary of Luther's birth, he gave as the third reformation the present reorganization of the Protestant Church under the Nazis.

He expressed the hope that Wittenberg, site of the Schlosskirche, Luther's church, would be made the seat of the reichs-bishop and thus become again the center of Protestant church life.

Bishop Mueller, welcoming Dr. Erling Eidem, Lutheran archbishop of Sweden to a festival which continues until Wednesday, said:

"A new Germany has arisen—born out of a will to truthfulness and carried on in the deepest conscience of Christian responsibility."

POLICE DRENCH DYE PICKETS

PATERSON, N. J., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Police turned fire hose on pickets surrounding the United Piece Dye Works at Lodi shortly after noon today as strikers estimated to number several thousand gathered about the plant.

As the pickets reformed their lines, broken by the streams of water, Police Sergt. John Uzinski was alleged to have flourished a gun, and was mobbed by the crowd.

Police again opened up with the hoses, and in the resulting melee, John Taci, editor of the Lodi Messenger, a weekly, was knocked unconscious, and an unidentified man received a laceration of the scalp. Taci was revived and was said to be not seriously hurt.

The police force was composed of 350 police and special deputies and 75 company guards.

Vet Workers Fired, Miners Call Strike

LANSFORD, Pa., Sept. 11.—(INS.)—Charging the company dismissed two miners eligible for retirement on pension, 1,400 miners at the Nesquehoning Colliery of the Lehigh Navigation Coal Company went out on strike today.

Spokesmen for the miners insisted the company's action was the first in a campaign designed to remove all elderly employes from the rolls and replace them with younger workers. They threatened to close all workings of the company in this section, which employe about 7,000 workers.

BRITISH HOST, AIDES GUARD EINSTEIN

CROMER, Norfolk, England, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Anybody attempting to molest Albert Einstein in his humble refuge on the Norfolk coast may get bullets from guns of his host's game keepers.

And if Commander Oliver Locker-Lampson himself is around, any intruder may have to face the revolver which the member of Parliament reputedly is carrying while the celebrated mathematician is under his protection.

Prof. Einstein arrived from London yesterday, fleeing reported Nazi threats against his life, and set about at once in his quiet tree-surrounded retreat to work on a new mathematical theory—the nature of which was not disclosed—and to prepare for lectures in America next month.

Seemingly content, Dr. Einstein said:

"All I want is peace. Where could I find a more peaceful retreat than here in England?

"At Le Coq (Le Coq-Su-Mer, Belgium) I was always guarded. It was a terrible strain. It interfered with my work. My friend has invited me here, and I hope to stay in England for a month."

He said he was not responsible for the "brown book" which incurred Hitlerite wrath and which, Nazis alleged, was a compilation of victims of persecution.

Einstein arrived in England from Belgium Saturday night following a report that Nazis had put a price on his head. Locker-Lampson, who offered Dr. Einstein the use of his Westminster house last April, met him at the station.

2 River Steamers Seized for Coal Bill

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Writs of attachment for the Ohio River steamers Senator Cordill and Queen City, were placed in the hands of United States marshals today for service.

The writs were issued in suits brought by Thomas Arthur May, of Point Pleasant, as receiver for the Hood Coal Company. He claims sums are due for coal supplied.

Nazis Free American Sailor on U. S. Appeal

BERLIN, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The intercession of American Consul-General George S. Messersmith today led the Prussian Ministry of Justice to pardon and release Thoursten Johnson, an American sailor who on August 12, was sentenced to six months' imprisonment for remarking to drinking companions that Chancellor Hitler was a Czech Jew.

Objections of Operators To Coal Code Provisions

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Six fundamental and 28 specific objections to the proposed NRA coal code were filed by the Northern Coal Control Association and the Smokeless Appalachian Coal Association, representing a majority of the tonnage in the Appalachian fields. The operators said:

"Our first fundamental objection is based on the fact that the code as proposed deprives the owners of the property of practically all of the rights of management, and will destroy any efficient and economical methods of production and result in such high cost as to be unfair to coal consumers who must use coal, and drive all consumers who can get substitute fuels to abandon the use of coal."

As a second objection, they said that the code was "based on the fact that its labor provisions are throughout designed for operation only in connection with a labor union, asserting:

"The rights of the individual employe or groups of employes are nowhere recognized or provided for."

That, they said, was contrary to the intention of the recovery act's labor provisions

INFLUENCE CURBED

The Appalachian operators also objected to the administrative setup, claiming that, although their field last year turned out 71.5 per cent of the nation's tonnage, it would represent "a very decided minority in the exercise of even such limited functions as the code leaves to the owners and operators of mines."

The proposal to institute a 36-hour average work week was termed "impractical and unworkable." They said:

"It will result in greatly increased costs of production, loss of business in coal and increased idleness, unemployment and loss of wages.

"Mines, like other industries, can only run when customers are willing to buy. If they are by law prohibited from producing and selling their product when the consumers are willing to buy, customers will go to other forms of fuel."

The share-the-work plan in the code met strenuous opposition.

"It is destructive of proper and efficient management and should not be in serious contemplation by the authorities. If we are to continue to operate our mines, this paragraph must necessarily be eliminated."

STATEMENT ASSAILED

The clause, they said, "misstates the requirements" of the recovery act's labor provisions "when it refers to 'workers who are organized in the manner required'" by the act.

The act, they said, "not only does not require that the workers organize, but expressly recognizes their right to deal individually."

Most of the Appalachian producers for years have opposed unionization of their mines.

They "insisted" that the "automobile" labor clause, specifying that the employer had the right to hire, discharge and promote employes without regard to membership in any organization, be included.

They objected to a requirement that miners paid by the ton should have their coal weighed by the company and checked by the miners, contending:

"It is an attempt by the federal government to regulate by federal law matters that are now regulated by state law in practically every state."

Installation of scales, they said, would be expensive and not justified under the law, "which is temporary in its nature."

PAYROLL PROTEST

They demanded modification of the provision requiring operators to pay miners' wages without deductions, unless deductions were agreed to by the miners and approved by the administration. They said:

"This paragraph limits the freedom of the employe to obtain advances of credit, or to engage in any commercial transaction with his employer without the consent of the government. It is, in our opinion, just as unfair to the employe as to the employer to attempt, in order to eradicate some accasional local abuses, to deprive both the individual employer and the individual employe of their rights to contract with each other."

Under the clause, the much disputed "check-off"—deduction of union dues from pay—could be instituted by agreement. The Appalachian operators have opposed the check-off. They suggested that the clause read "the net amount of wages due shall be paid semi-monthly in lawful money or in pay check, at the option of the operators." That would permit deduction of store bills and the like, and at the same time not specifically recognize bargaining for the check-off.

PRICE FIXING HIT

Marketing and price fixing clauses met equally strong objections.

They called "visionary and impractical" the proposal that coal should be sold at a price sufficiently high to furnish stable employment to miners.

They objected to the labor dispute arbitration system as "particularly designed to drive employes into a union." They said it would tend to "delay and prolong disputes."

"The section treating of labor relations does not provide any suitable method whereby the obligations of labor can be made enforceable against the employer or employes."

CHISLERS FACE BLUE EAGLE EXPULSION

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The NRA has rejected appeals for an immediate campaign of force to insure compliance with the Blue Eagle pledge.

Instead, it was disclosed today, a policy of persuasion and patriotic appeal—with force only a last resort—will be pursued.

The question of policy in preventing "chiseling" under the Blue Eagle agreements made voluntarily with the President, as distinguished from permanent codes, has been studied by Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, and his aides since the September 1 time limit expired.

FACE HUGE TASK

With the great mapority of employers brought under the temporary code in the Blue Eagle drive, a huge task faces the NRA in policing these agreements pending adoption of permanent codes.

Appeals have rolled in upon Johnson from state and local recovery officials for authority to take down the Blue Eagle and cite individual employers for violation of the agreement.

Some of Johnson's aides were preparing to select a few "outstanding examples" of violators immediately after Labor Day, but were stopped.

Under plans now being made, a system of decentralized enforcement under strict national control, will be invoked.

CONSIDER BAN

Specially designated officials of the NRA will seek violators of the Blue Eagle agreements. The first approach will be a judicial decision upon complaints made by the 1,500,000 Blue Eagle drive workers, A. F. of L. members and others.

If an employer is held to be a violator of the code, a patriotic appeal will be made to him to reverse his course. Failure to win his consent will be reported to the NRA. A tentative proposal is to authorize the removal of a "chiseler's" name from a roll of honor of Blue Eagle employers.

In the end the NRA may authorize the taking away of the Blue Eagle, with attendant publicity. Legal authorities hold the agreements with the President cannot be enforced in the courts.

Union Recognized, Trolley Strike Off

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Charles B. Barnes, mediator for the National Labor Board, today had announced that a dispute between the Cleveland Railway Company and approximately 3,000 carmen, which had threatened to tie up the city's transportation system with a strike, had been practically settled.

The basis of the settlement, Barnes said, included full recognition by the company of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, the principal point for which the carmen had contended.

'BUTTONS' AGAIN PAGES LUCKY ELEVEN

"Buttons," the Sun-Telegraph page boy, starts out today on his happy mission of giving away money. "Buttons" has already become so well known that he is a welcome figure in any neighborhood and, naturally a more welcome caller, because every time he rings a doorbell that means somebody in that house has been "paged."

"Buttons"

And being "paged" by the Sun-Telegraph page boy means a present of real cash to the person "paged." "Buttons" is "paging" 11 new names today. They are listed in this edition of the Sun-Telegraph in a box on the Classified pages. One of these persons is going to be more fortunate than the 10 others because this particular one will get an award of $5. The others will each be handed $1 when he calls.

Whether it is the $5 bill or the $1 bill there is a thrill in getting it, just as if it had dropped out of a clear sky.

"Buttons," by the way, is working on a mighty worthy cause. He's boosting the drive to "Spend a Dollar . . . Make a Job . . . Spend in September and Save." It is assumed that the people of Pittsburgh on whom "Buttons" calls will spring into the spirit of the recovery drive and immediately spend the money that the uniformed messenger of the Sun-Telegraph is sending out every day.

Turn to the Want Ad pages now and see if your name is in the list. Keep looking. If it isn't there today, it may be tomorrow. "Buttons" has to "page" 11 names every day. Perhaps he will push the button on your doorbell some time this week. Watch for him.

BANDITS FLEE VICTIM'S PAL

Week-end thieves took $500 in jewelry and currency when they ransacked the home of H. B. Luxterman, 407 Glen Arden drive, Squirrel Hill, after gaining entrance by smashing a window.

County detectives are searching for the bandits who beat and robbed C. A. Trudel, of 400 Centennial avenue, Sewickley, a cab driver. According to the report, the men engaged the cab in Sewickley and ordered to be driven to Coraopolis. En route, Trudel said, he was slugged and bound. One of the men drove through the South Side, and Trudel was thrown from the cab in Beck's Run road, he said.

Detectives, on request of Raleigh authorities, again visited the East Liberty address Saturday and arrested Watkins.

Now Without That Sea Plug Whales Would Drown

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The whale has two enormous plugs in his nose—much like bathtub stoppers—and that's why he's a submarine.

When the whale is deep down in the ocean, the plugs prevent the escape of air from the lungs.

People of 65 to Control World, Scientist Says

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Editor.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—(AP.)—Chemical diets inducing a new human virility which will transfer the nation's executive control to men and women of 65 was forecast last night to the American chemical society.

These new diets, said Prof. H. C. Sherman, of Columbia University, will be the outgrowth of the recently developed but now familiar "protective diets", of milk, fruits, eggs and vegetables.

He said:

"The expectation of life will be extended from 70 to 77 years. Man at his chosen tasks will be at the height of his powers at 65 instead of 58. The age at which it is difficult to get new jobs in a field, now commonly put at 45, will be 52.

"Age will yield less readily to youth, and older men and women will to a greater extent rule in human affairs."

Totals for the three days give Republicans 403,538 and the Democrats 168,814.

EDUCATORS ASK FREE SCHOOLS, PAID PUPILS

Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Nationally known educators in emergency conclave have decided that schools should not only provide free education to all the young and in some cases to the adults, but that in certain instances the scholars should actually be paid for going to school.

This proposal was made in the report of the national conference on the financing of education which was held under auspices of the joint commission on the emergency in education. The report was published today by the national education association.

Among recommendations made by the conference, which was attended by some 40 leaders in education from all over the country, were:

1—To provide suitable education at public expense and require attendance from early childhood until employment is advisable and obtainable.

2—To provide whatever education facilities for adults will best serve the welfare of society.

3—Rehabilitate through public education the workers forced from a particular vocation.

4—When necessary provide livelihood as well as educational facilities for youth until society is prepared to offer employment.

There was no elaboration in the voluminous report, which is being sent to educators throughout the country.

SLEEP MALADY STILL SPREADS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Another woman scientist was here today to aid in the battle against sleeping sickness which has taken a total of 117 victims.

She is Dr. Josephine Neal, of New York City Health Department, a widely known authority on encephalitis.

It was a woman who made the first important discovery in the St. Louis epidemic—Dr. Margaret G. Smith, Washington University pathologist. She reported finding "inclusion bodies" in kidneys of victims which apparently contained the virus responsible for the infection.

As St. Louis battled with the dread and mysterious disease, St. Joseph, a smaller Missouri metropolis, reported encephalitis had reached epidemic proportions there. Eight deaths have been reported, 11 have been pronounced cured and others are confined at home or in City Isolation Hospital.

The death of a woman, 66, of the disease, was reported last night at Independence, Mo.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The first case of "sleeping sickness" in Chicago was reported early today when Benjamin Arkow, 3, was taken to a hospital with an illness diagnosed by Dr. Charles Berkowitz, attending physician, as encephalitis.

Woman Driver's Car Collides With Steer

GREENSBURG, Pa., Sept. 11.—When her automobile hit a steer which blocked the road, Mrs. W. K. Rifor, of Johnstown, narrowly escaped serious injury as the car careened toward a ditch.

The steer was so badly injured it was killed.

Jealous Husband Kills Wife and Girl

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—Swinging an ax with maniacal fury, Peter Kowalsczek, 42, chopped his wife and step-daughter to death at their home here today.

The victims were Mrs. Lillian Kowalsczek, 31, and her daughter by a former marriage, Anna Nicholas, 9. Captured shortly after, Kowalsczek told police he was jealous of his wife.

Tropical Storm Moving on South

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—A tropical disturbance of wide extent and of considerable intensity centered about 400 miles northeast of San Juan moving northwestward at 12 miles per hour was reported by the weather bureau today. Minor disturbances were reported to have developed between Belize and Honduras.

FLOOD CONTROL SPEED HERE URGED

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Emergency Administrator of Public Works, has been urged in a wire by Congressman Henry Ellenbogen to approve the flood control project for the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers.

A plan providing for the construction of eight dams has been approved by Maj. W. D. Styer, chief of United States Engineers in the Pittsburgh district. Final authority to pass on the proposal rests with Ickes' office.

Ellenbogen declares that the program would be of lasting benefit to Pittsburgh and surrounding territory, that the plans are ready and that the project should be approved and started at once to provide much-needed employment.

Work on navigation improvements on rivers here recently approved at Washington will go ahead at once, according to Maj. Styer.

Bids on the new Allegheny River dam No. 3 near Verona will be received September 27. Plans and specifications will be sent to prospective bidders on the new Montgomery Island dam on the Ohio River in about three weeks, Maj. Styer stated.

Officials in Tribute To Viscount Grey

LONDON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Statesmen, peers, diplomats and many other notables attended an impressive memorial service in Westminster Abbey today, honoring Viscount Grey, of Fallodon, who died last Thursday.

The elaborate ceremony was in contrast to the simple rites on Saturday in Northumberland village, where neighbors paid tribute to a man they knew as a lover of nature rather than as a great statesman.

Thrush Joins Ship 300 Miles Out, Rides Cabin

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The liner Berlin docked yesterday with a crested brown thrush traveling first cabin.

The thrush boarded the liner Saturday morning 300 miles out of New York and at once took possession of cabin 27.

Steward Albert Steckman expressed the belief that since thrushes are not distance fliers, this one must have flown to the Berlin from an outbound ship.

Steckman said cabin 27 required all sorts of things like baths in ash trays, food and such, while passengers constantly interfered with his work by inquiring of the health and mental condition of 27's inmate.

FARMER SILENT IN GIRL KILLING

BEDFORD, Pa., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Marshall Steele, 65, a Hopewell farmer, is in jail on a charge of fatally shooting his son's 15-year-old sweetheart, and members of his family are back in the home they left two months ago after a quarrel.

William Steele, 24, the son, said his father fired the shot that killed Emma Snyder, the girl, while young Steele and Miss Snyder were driving past the Steele home. The father refuses to talk after having denied he was responsible for her death.

The youth said his mother and other members of the family were compelled to leave the home after a dispute.

An inquest will be held tomorrow.

Globe-Trotting

—By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN—

Hello ladies and gentlemen:

It's a good thing that three ladies decided to write and not come down, a good thing for me, I mean. All of them make practically the same accusations, that their old friend, the Globe Trotter, double-crossed them, lulled them into what they thought was a state of security then without warning did an "about face."

When we mentioned that the curves were coming back and that fashion had decreed the Mae West figure they glanced at their mirrored roundness and complacently reached for another marshmallow. Then the shock. The broadcast statement of Adrian's manifesto that hips shall remain under control and that Garbo and Crawford shall be the examples of fashionable figures.

One moans, "And I let myself get three pounds heavier since the first broadcast."

"A SAFETY-STEEL BODY SAVED MY LIFE!"

"Ten tons landed on my Plymouth ...and I lived to tell the Tale"

FRED C. NOBLE is a Plymouth salesman. But Fred Noble isn't giving you sales talk when he tells you you are safer in a Plymouth!

He's alive today to talk to you—because Plymouth has a modern body of safety-steel!

They don't show the terrific impact of those ten tons traveling at 40 miles an hour! They don't show how the force of the crash drove the wheels four and five inches into the solid earth!

They don't show how the Plymouth was found to be perfectly in line after the accident—how doors opened easily and closed perfectly.

But these things are not the point. The point is that a life was saved. Saved because Plymouth is built of steel reinforced with steel.

We hope you never have a ten-ton load drop onto your car. But if you do—we hope, for your sake, you are traveling in a modern car—with a safety-steel body built to fit today.

Go see your Plymouth dealer—and let him show you how safety-steel gives greater protection.

STANDARD MODELS: 2-door sedan $465; 4-door sedan $510; rumble seat coupe $485; business coupe $445. De Luxe Models: 2-door sedan $525; 4-door sedan $575; convertible coupe $595; rumble seat coupe $545; business coupe $495. All prices F.O.B. factory, subject to change.

"DRIVING DOWN GRADE, I signalled for a left turn. A big truck was coming right behind me."

"I MADE THE TURN—crash! The truck turned over—the whole load came down on my car!"

"FRIENDS MARVEL that I escaped without serious injury. I give all the credit to Plymouth."

"EVERY TIME I LOOK at my youngsters—and think of what happened that day—I thank Heaven that Plymouth designers are satisfied only with safety-steel bodies!"

STRATOSPHERE NEXT GOAL OF AVIATION

By ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT
Aviation Editor of the Sun-Telegraph.

LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—Aviation's next big advance will be recorded away up in the skies.

This is no idle phrase, but just another way of saying that future development in speed of our airliners must be made in higher altitudes and that to continue the rapid progress of the last decade man must conquer the stratosphere.

The stratosphere plane is not yet here, but it surely is on the way.

In a modified form it is already beginning to emerge and take shape.

SOME GOVERNMENTS LEAD

Capital is needed whenever an innovation in an industry is perfected. Most of the significant advances in aviation in the past have been financed by far-sighted men or governments who had the courage to put up their money and support. In other countries the governments have led the procession.

Leading aeronautical designers point out that the way to greater speeds, greater comfort and greater safety leads upward into the rarified atmosphere. There most of the weather hazard is eliminated and less resistance is encountered by a plane in flight.

The modern stream-lined airliners have practically reached the limit of their efficiency. With the help of the wind tunnel and modern science, aircraft designers have been able to fashion and build planes that have reduced unnecessary drag to a minimum approaching zero. They have jumped cruising speeds of commercial planes almost 100 per cent—and all that in less than five years.

NO BUILDING IN U. S.

To get more speed requires more power, and the greater the increase in speed the greater the need for power—or increase as to the square of the speed, to be exact. More power means more weight and more weight means less payload.

Farman, the great French designer of planes, has built a stratosphere plane and others have been designed and built. Here, in the United States, we have talked a lot and built little or nothing in that direction. Not because we do not know what is wanted or how to meet the problems.

It takes money to develop anything new. It is unfortunate but true that so far no one with sufficient courage and foresight has come forward to back up able engineers in the perfection of such a plane. Some development of this type may be going on in secret. At least, I hope so, and will be glad to learn that I am wrong.

STRUCTURAL STARTS

The encouraging thing is this:

The most essential factors for higher altitude planes are suitable motors and construction adaptable to airtight structures. In both of these we have made excellent starts.

Boeing, Douglas, Northrop, Vultee, Martin, Consolidated—and many others have built structures which have the adaptability to airtight bodies. These must be made rigid so that they can be supercharged inside for the comfort of the passengers who then can breathe air as of a 6,000 or 8,000-foot level while skimming through the thin ozones of 25,000 or 30,000-foot heights.

Noise insulations can go hand in hand with these structures. Already this has been accomplished. The other day I flew in a big Douglas, at 200 miles an hour, with less noise than in a Pullman car.

In supercharging motors America also has made some important advances, although the details have not yet been released to the general public. It is doubtful that we have been able to equal the accomplishments of France, England and Italy in this respect, but we can do it.

MOTORS GASP

For the benefit of the layman it should be explained that in higher altitudes motors gasp for air much the same as humans. Supercharging compensates for the lack of air somewhat like the oxygen tank, but in a different way.

Blower fans, rotating at tremendous velocities, force great drafts of rarified air into the heart of the motor, the carburetor—and create a pressure that makes it of desired consistency. To be sure, there still remains the problem of cooling the motors, but this, too, can be solved.

I expect that before long we will hear some significant news about American stratosphere planes.

This nation has often risen to opportunities for pioneering in the past. Will she be found wanting in this most important step toward the ultimate safety and efficiency in the air?

Cot Club To Meet

Ogontz Alumnae Association is proud of itself, and no wonder. More than 800 persons attended its supper-dance and swimming exhibit Saturday night at Longue Vue Country Club . . . all for the benefit of the dispensary of the Tuberculosis Hospital.

The parking lot of the clubhouse was soon filled, and cars were parked for a mile away.

Acquatic Exhibit

The exhibit given by Champion Lenore Kight and her Homestead Library swimming team at the club's pool was the high spot of the evening. Lenore won all the races. And after all that exercise she joined the dancers.

A bit of comedy, much applauded, was offered by a man, dressed in a woman's bathing suit, who clowned every dive made by the experts.

John Kohne, of Amberson avenue, won the West Indies cruise prize, by the way. And the general chairman of the remarkably large benefit was Mrs. Clinton L. Childs.

There were four volunteer cigaret girls—Polly Rowles, Jane Campbell, Margaret Niedringhaus and Agatha Munhall, of Washington.

FIRST COOL DAY BRINGS OUT SIGNS OF FUTURE FASHIONS

FASHION WRITERS as well as stylists and designers—in fact, all people who are in style work—hike to fashionable restaurants as soon as a new season begins. They know from experience that there one often sees the start of a successful fashion; there chic women often launch the clothes of the future.

* * *

THAT IS why a cool day should send you scurrying off to the smartest eating place you know, as likewise it sends us. Here, between the cocktail and the avocado pear, you should be rewarded by a cross-section of what's what in fashion.

* * *

THE MOST exciting thing about our visit to New York's most famous outdoor restaurant was the blackberry velveteen coat-dress illustrated on the left. This color and the fabric will be heard from often this fall, we warrant you, as well as the fashion for dresses that really simulate coats. Under the wide revers, the wearer tucked a bright blue, raspberry and royal purple plaid velvet scarf, filling in the neckline completely, as most good daytime dresses should do this season. The stunning dress was topped by a blackberry fur-felt fedora, as supple and shiny as velvet—infinitely smart! The dark raspberry band on the hat matches the velveteen gloves and large bag.

* * *

PLAID HAS for some time been a favorite staple, and this year you will find it applied in innumerable ways. Plaid velveteen is smart with plain velveteen, and plaid woolen smart with plain woolen. There are endless combinations. But the newest and most unusual version of all is a delicately hand-painted plaid suede! That effectively costumed woman on the right wears a dark woody-brown knitted suit cleverly trimmed in this colorful new leather. It is one of the best-looking spectator sports outfits we've come across.

* * *

THE BRIMMED hat worn with it has several high spots. It, too, is suede, with a stitched surface instead of the conventional plain. It is slightly mannish, almost an exact copy of a man's port snap-brim felt. It is typical of the type of sports hat you'll see this fall and winter.

* * *

LATER ON, as the days grow colder, this same two-piece suit will probably be worn to football games under a three-quarter length Alaska sealskin or beaver coat. It will be quite loosely cut, tied at the neck by a large ascot. It will look equally well over rugged sports clothes and more formal town costumes.

RACKET SLAYING IN SEWICKLEY UNSOLVED

Fashionable Sewickley looked today to its new police chief, Roy C. Barclay, for a solution of the killing of the ambitious Dominic Toia, 22, said to be one of the lesser lights in the valley whisky traffic, who was ambushed in true racket fashion Saturday night.

The new chief—who was to assume his duties today—looked the situation over yesterday along with county detectives, but reported finding nothing to establish the identity of the men who shot Toia or why they did it.

A few of the members and officers of the newly organized Italian-American Club, in front of whose portals the murder occurred, are scheduled to be herded into the County Detective Bureau for questioning today, but the sleuths aren't banking on much light from that source.

'SMALL FRY,' POLICE SAY

Toia, police say, was connected with a speakeasy in the heart of Sewickley's business section. The whisky end of the business was Toia's, the police say.

To police Toia was small fry, "a fresh kid." He put on the airs of a real gangster, those who knew him said, and swaggered around like a young man about town.

However, whatever realism was lacking in the life of young Toia came to him in death. A few minutes before midnight, Toia sauntered away from a street corner in the business district, waved to the policeman on the beat, walked a block to an "appointment" to play cards in the Italian Club. He had joined the club Saturday.

DEAD IN THE GUTTER

A minute later, the policeman on the beat heard a shot in the direction Toia had gone. As he moved hurriedly up the street, he heard three more in rapid succession, and when he arrived at the club Toia was lying dead in the gutter.

Anyone of the three bullets that bored into Toia's body would have killed him, the Coroner's physician said. The first of these, police said, found the center of his forehead.

It was fired at close range, an examination revealed, and it is believed the assassins surprised Toia as he swung into the yard of the club.

'ALWAYS LATE'

Reconstructing the crime, sleuths believed Toia turned to run from the three other bullets that sped after him. Two of them entered his back, one high and the other low.

At Toia's home in Dickson road, Sewickley's Italian sector, where, besides his aged parents, his bride of a month mourn for him today, police could learn only that Toia had gone to the club.

He would be late, he had told the homefolks. Toia was always late, they said.

A word to the wise . . . .

. . . We LIKE excitement, 'cause we're fairly young—and we like our patrons to be enthusiastic about our store. But never, never do we lapse in respect due to our customers by loudly trumpeting a sale which has no real claims to your attention . . .

Spanked by Mother, Girl Of 19 Complains

Should girls of 19 be spanked?

Is that the best way to make regular citizens of them?

And does a spanking mother deserve medals . . . or a bawling out?

Dearest Elsie:

You are a kindred spirit of mine, and I know you will understand my problems, because you are a motherly woman, and will know how I feel.

I am 19 years old, and an only child. I live with my adored mother. She is a rare personality. A woman of great distinction and charm. She is exceptionally brilliant, and we are really great pals. She is modern as tomorrow—yet an old-fashioned quality lingers in her. I will come to that later.

Daddy died years ago, and Mummie brought me up thoughtfully and tenderly. She has always been sweet, but rather forceful and domineering. She works in a publishing house and is very self-sufficient. We have a lovely apartment and a charming circle of friends. She is a famous hostess, and has the faculty of surrounding herself with very interesting people. I hope this gives you a clear picture of her. She is fine.

And now for the problem. I know it is rather difficult to bring up a headstrong young lady. I am naturally disobedient, because I like to rely upon myself. I am always getting into trouble because I am adventurous and curious. When I used to misbehave, Mummie scolded me thoroughly, but lately . . . in desperation, she said . . . she tried something else. I went to a dance the other night. I had such a joyous time that I didn't keep tab on the flying hours. I am sorry to say that I arrived home about 5 o'clock in the morning.

SPANKED BY MOTHER

She met me at the door, with her most formidable brow and sternest mouth. She said—"I've finished with scolding you, youngster! You need something more drastic!" And before I could say one word, she turned me across her knee and spanked me terribly.

Imagine! Spanking a 19-year-old girl! I was dumbfounded and so angry I couldn't speak. I hadn't done anything wrong. She had always trusted me so. She knows I never would betray that trust, because I am always true to my finer instincts. So why should she be so angry because I happened to come home late?

I haven't spoken to her since. Just now I am visiting my grandmother. But I miss Mummie terribly. She informed me before I left that every time I "misbehaved" or didn't obey her she would spank me again. Therefore I am in a quandary.

Please, won't you help me?

FANIA.

Help you? I'd like to, Fania, but it's dollars to doughnuts that neither you nor Mother would take the medicine which you both need. For this isn't just a case of a Bad Girl and a Mad Mamma. It's a question of two headstrong humans who are making a mess of their respective programs—and then blaming each other for the consequences.

LIFE OF PARASITE

Here you are—a 19-year-old woman, plenty smart enough to be making your own way in life. But what's happening? You're living—as far as your picture shows—the life of a perfectly useless young parasite, allowing another woman to support you. In other words—

Mother is making a tramp out of you, then getting sore because you act like one.

I don't approve of spanking for youngsters of any age. But if you permit yourself to be supported like a nit-wit or an infant, why get steamed up if the punishment fits the picture? If you wish the rights and respect accorded a full-grown woman, be one.

And as for Mother—it seems to me that if she can't devise a more intelligent method of control than spanking for a 19-year-old daughter, there's something lacking in her brain. If you were mine, Fania, I'd find you a job if I had to make one, then I'd make you responsible for your own hours. But I'd certainly never expose my own incompetence as a parent by acting like a mad female gorilla.

But, as I said before, I'm not expecting either Fania or her mother to agree with that prescription. How about you?

Fay King Finds Character Often Outshines Mere Beauty

By FAY KING

There is something homely about the most beautiful face that is relaxed into an expression of boredom and disgust.

And there is something beautiful about the plainest face that beams with interest, enthusiasm and inspiration.

I have seen young couples together so bright and gay and full of character that it was a pleasure to sit opposite them in a train.

But I have glimpsed, at smart places, luxurious girls lapse into moments of relaxation from their assumed vivacity, and look so sullen one could not envy them.

It is the same with men, also. The homeliest man may have such an eager, ambitious, interesting face that he is more attractive than the handsomest rich waster, who looks bored and dissipated.

Madge Certain That Hugh Was Overheard by Lee Chow

At my plea to Hugh to forgive me for the rebuke I had given him, a plea born of the sudden remembrance of Dicky's unexplained association with the mysterious "Floss," I saw him thrust his hands down at his sides, his fingers digging into the palms, while his teeth came down into his lips so hard that I saw a tiny drop of blood flecking them.

"You cannot know what you are doing to me when you look up at me like that," he said slowly. "Please don't be kind to me again! I can stand your rebukes, although they wound me—I must be honest enough to tell you that—but your kindness—can't you guess, my—my—love? I will call you that this once. Can't you guess that words and looks like those you just gave me make it impossible for me to keep my arms from sweeping you close to me? No!"—as I uttered a startled little exclamation and pushed my chair back ever so slightly—"do not be afraid. I shall not offend you again. I have my heart—and my arms under control, now—" the weary smile touched his lips again. "You said you wished to ask my advice about something—what is the matter?" as I half rose from my chair with a startled little exclamation.

"It is nothing," I said, racking my brain for some excuse to give him. "I thought I saw a mouse over there by the wainscoting."

A VAGUE FEAR

I did not dare look at him, as I uttered the mendacity. I knew that he knew there never was a mouse "on sea or land" that had the slightest terror for me. But I could not tell him that at the end of the room I had seen a portiere move, one that evidently separated the little room from a hall, and had caught a glimpse of a face looking through it.

It was a Chinese face, and though I could not be certain, I would have staked much that it was the face of Lee Chow, fidus Achates of Hugh, the high born Chinese whom, for the last few weeks, I had vaguely dreaded.

From one or two things I had heard Lee Chow say, and from certain odd looks which I had seen him send toward me when Hugh and I were together, I had conceived the fantastic idea that this friend of Hugh's had decided that I ought to belong to Hugh, if he wanted me. I knew enough of Oriental fatalism to guess that no ordinary conventions or considerations would stand in Lee Chow's way if he once made up his mind that by some action of his, within the law or outside of it, he could bring about the consummation which he evidently thought Hugh desired.

If it were indeed he behind that curtain, if he had heard that impassioned declaration of Hugh's, he would have no doubt that Hugh wanted me. What action would follow on that confirmation of his "idee fixe"?

I could not repress the shiver that shook me at the thought, and Hugh put a reassuring hand upon my arm.

"Your nerves must be absolutely shattered," he said. "I never knew anything to affect you like this before. And a mouse! I can remember——"

ASKS HUGH'S ADVICE

He broke off short, and I remembered also, an experience when he and I had been together in a bit of work for the secret service and I had not quailed from a huge rat which ran around the room where we were for the moment concealed.

"Poor child!" he resumed. "You must not stay here any longer."

"Oh! yes, I must," I told him quickly. "I am perfectly all right now. Look!"

I held out my arm and by a mighty effort of will compelled it to steadiness.

"You are a marvel!" he said admiringly. "What is it you want me to do?"

"Sit down here, and let me tell you what I discovered just now in my telephone conversation with Mr. Veritzen," I said calmly. "I need your advice sorely."

"I am afraid you won't find it worth much," he said.

"Let me be the judge of that, please," I answered, trying hard to inject a note of lightness into my voice.

"Whatever I have is at your service, you know that," he said, his voice suddenly deep again, and I struck into my story hurriedly.

"I do not know whether I have been mawkishly sentimental in protecting an utterly worthless girl, or not," I began.

"By worthless girl I suppose you are referring to Avis Arlen," he said.

I looked at him, startled. "How can you possibly know that?" I asked.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Phosphorus and Lime Diet

Not so long ago I told you about rickets. It was pointed out that when the diet is lacking in lime and phosphorus and deficient in vitamin D, serious disturbances occur in the body. Today I want to tell you about another disorder which, like rickets, is caused by faulty utilization of lime and phosphorus.

Dr. Copeland

A lack of lime in the body leads to a condition called "tetany." The victim of this disorder suffers from convulsive and uncontrollable contractions of the muscles of the body. Though the affliction is more common in children who suffer from rickets, the disease may also be encountered in women who have recently become mothers. In such instances it is believed to be due to a depletion of lime in the body of the mother during her pregnancy.

For many years little was known about this unusual and often fatal disorder. The treatment consisted of giving lime to the sufferer, but little benefit followed. Fortunately, scientists discovered that the "parathyroid glands" control the secretion of lime in the body and that an extract made from these glands benefits sufferers from tetany.

The parathyroid glands are four little glands attached to the thyroid gland in the neck. These glands secrete a substance that regulates the use of lime in the body. This function is influenced by other internal secretions of the body and is effected by diet, hygiene and the mode of living.

A recent investigation shows that many school children suffer from a general lack of nutrition. Food authorities deplore the fact that the diet of many American children is deficient in its lime content. It is believed that this can easily be remedied by the liberal use of milk in the diet and by the addition of foods that are rich in lime and phosphorus.

Bear in mind that a child who is inefficient in his school work, restless, nervous, inattentive, and slow in thinking, may be suffering from a lack of lime and phosphorus in the diet. Too often a child is sent to school without proper provision being made for his lunch. It is essential to have every parent realize that the growing child requires a definite number of calories, abundant vitamins, lime and other important elements that will assure proper growth and development.

Answers to Health Queries

Miss G. F. Q.—What should a girl of 16, 5 feet 2 inches tall weigh, also a girl of 18, 5 feet tall?

* * *

A.—They should weigh respectively about 114 and 112 pounds. This is about the average weight for people of this age and height as determined by examination of a large number of persons. A few pounds above or below the average is a matter of little or no significance.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Fork in Either Hand

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle this question for us: My husband says that it doesn't matter if you eat with both knife and fork. I told him that after he cuts a piece of meat he should change his fork to the right hand and lay the knife down on the plate. Tell us which is the proper way, please. G.

Either way is proper, the fork-shifting way of eating, or the non-fork-shifting way. If your husband prefers the non-fork-shifting way, he's right to choose it.

Putting Letter in Envelope

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

How should a letter be enclosed in an envelope—with the edges upward, or with the creased end toward the top of the envelope? E.

With the edges upward. This is reasonable, since when the envelope is opened, the opener does not cut through the fold of the letter-paper.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Slam Bidding

Every Contract player knows that the average player loses thousands of points annually through lack of precision in bidding for Slams. With a great many partnerships the big hands are the most expensive, because hands that will produce only five are often bid to six, and those that are good for only six are bid to seven. On the other hand, many otherwise good Bridge players who are inclined to be conservative do not cash in on the makable Grand Slams.

One of the chief factors in the victory of the United States team in the first match for the world's championship trophy presented by Charles M. Schwab, held in London recently, was the great precision of the Americans in bidding for Slams, and the inaccuracy of their English competitors, who, using outmoded methods, were unable to obtain as good results.

One of the hands which contributed to the American victory was that shown below, in which the American East-West pair reached a Grand Slam, which was of course made laid down, while the British players with the same cards stopped at six. It is interesting to note the contrasting courses of the bidding.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

	♠ 7 6 ♡ 7 5 3 ◇ 9 8 7 6 4 3 ♣ Q 8
♠ A K 9 3 ♡ K 6 4 ◇ — ♣ A K 9 6 4 3	North West East South	♠ Q J 10 4 2 ♡ A J 10 ◇ A Q J ♣ 10 5
	♠ 8 5 ♡ Q 9 8 2 ◇ K 10 5 2 ♣ J 7 2

ROOM NO. 1

North	East
Col. H. M. Beasley	Mr. T. Lightner
Pass	1 ♠
Pass	3 ♠
Pass	5 N T
Pass	Pass
South	West
Mr. G. Mathieson	Mr. E. Culbertson

Final declaration, seven spades. East, Declarer. Lead, ♡ 2. Result, E-W made 13 tricks.

ROOM NO. 2

North	East
Mrs. Culbertson	Sir Guy Domville
Pass	1 ♠

South	West
Mr. M. Gottlieb	Mr. G. Morris
Pass	3 ♣
Pass	6 ♠
Pass

Final declaration, six spades. East, Declarer. Lead, ◇ 2. Result, E-W made 12 tricks.

The interesting bid in Room 1 was Mr. Lightner's rebid of his suit although it consisted of only five cards to the Queen-Knave-Ten. He made this bid because his hand was above minimum strength and a no-trump response here would have denied that fact. In order to paint a correct picture of his holding he preferred to draw a slightly exaggerated picture of the trump holding rather than a wrong picture of the hand as a whole. The result of this was that he and Mr. Culbertson reached the final declaration of a Grand Slam. Where the English held big cards, the first two bids were the same, but Sir Guy Domville elected to respond with three notrump to his partner's Forcing Takeout, and the final contract became six spades. Lacking the precision of the American methods, Sir Guy Domville did not dare to venture to seven because of the fear of danger somewhere in the hand.

Today's Question

You are not vulnerable. Your partner has opened the bidding with one club and Second Hand has passed. You hold:

♠ — ♡ Q 10 9 4 3 ◇ K J 2 ♣ A J 9 5 4

What do you bid?

Answer: One heart. This bid enables you to obtain more information from your partner while the bidding still is at a low level. Your Raises for the club suit will be given later on in the bidding, according to the way it has proceeded. The fact that the heart suit is just barely biddable and your club support is most excellent should not prevent you from trying to exchange information.

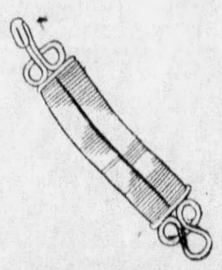
Babette's News of Accessories!

It's on! The season when even a brief dash through Kaufmann's first floor leaves one with wild longings. Here are a few samples of what you'll find. Oh, go ahead and read about them. Buying is the patriotic thing to do, these days!



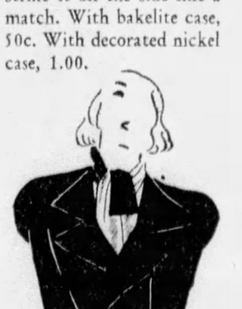
Look what's happened to the good old hook-and-eye! It gave up trying to compete with zippers, I suppose—and set out to find a new interest in life. It has! Enter—the Hook-and-Eye Bracelet, which bright gals are going to wear with their smart sports dresses to make them smarter. Just two bands of gold or silver mesh, fastened with a mammoth hook and eye. 1.25 is the price.

And speaking of gloves . . . I liked this pair of imported slip-ons. They're made of real kid, and are shirred at the wrist (with elastic) to make them fit well. In black, livened up with white . . . or mauve, with brown for contrast. 3.50 is the price.

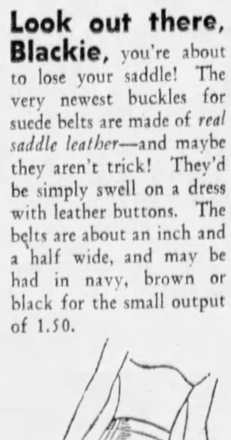
Here's the Patou Ball Bag. It doesn't take a master mind to figure out how it got its name. You'll like the gleam of those silver balls against the sleekness of the black suede. You'll like the convenient arrangement inside, with the zipper center pocket. And you'll like the price, my deahs—5.00! Incidentally this is just one of numerous styles in suede at that price.

The light that shines in her eyes is nothing to the quick light that flares up on her very own cigarette lighter! They're now making these feminine lighters so small that they take up hardly any room at all in a woman's handbag . . . and are yet darn efficient. Look at those at 75c, encased in something that resembles pearl—plain or mottled (quite dainty and nice). And at those called Match Kings, which look like perfume flacons. You pull the stopper out and strike it on the side like a match. With bakelite case, 50c. With decorated nickel case, 1.00.

Look out there, Blackie, you're about to lose your saddle! The very newest buckles for suede belts are made of real saddle leather—and maybe they aren't trick! They'd be simply swell on a dress with leather buttons. The belts are about an inch and a half wide, and may be had in navy, brown or black for the small output of 1.50.



France sends us the Monte Carlo Scarfs, designed by Echo. They're as glamorous as the place from which they get their name. The colors are simply glorious. Gold (and it actually gleams like real gold) combined with green, brown, or wine. Silver (as silvery as a moonbeam) combined with red or black. An exquisite addition, one of these, to any of your more formal costumes! Priced 10.00.



Silk woven elastic, made to conform to the shape of the body—that's the secret of the faultless fit of this step-in! It won't work up ridges. It won't bulge. It won't slip up, or do any of those bothersome things girdles are wont to do. It will lie smooth and docile under your sleek new dresses. Twelve inches wide with four supporters. And when you hear the price, I wager you'll come scampering. It's 1.00!

No—no need to put a detective on the trail of suede gloves to match your eel grey clothes! Detective Babette saw some arrive at Kaufmann's glove counter. They're demi-mousquetaires with scalloped tops. 4.00 they are—and the shade is just the brownish-grey you need.

A Letter from a Housewife

★

TO THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

A Typical American Woman tells How She Is Helping NATIONAL RECOVERY

WE DO NOT KNOW whether President Roosevelt ever saw this letter or not. It is just possible that the woman who wrote it "lost her nerve" and never put it in the mail.

But we saw it—and we think the President should have seen it. So we are printing it—to make sure it reaches his attention. We would like to thank the typical American housewife who wrote this letter.

• • •

"Dear Mr. President," she wrote, "there has been a lot in the papers about National Recovery, but yesterday something happened that made me realize for the first time how important ordinary people like us are in your big scheme of things.

"I stopped in a small local shop to buy the baby some rompers. I thought I noticed several new clerks. They didn't seem very busy, so I spoke to the proprietor.

"He said, 'Yes, we have put on several new people. We try to do our part.' But he seemed a bit worried.

"Now I know enough about business to realize that that merchant can't afford to pay those people if he doesn't do more business than he has been lately. And all at once I felt a little guilty—as though I were partly to blame for the way things are.

"You see, the baby really needs half a dozen pairs of rompers. I bought only two. The reason was that for some time we have been 'getting along'—buying just as little as we had to.

"A couple of years ago, I wouldn't have thought twice; I would have bought half a dozen rompers—maybe more. But I've been trying to cut expenses. All of our friends have been skimping just as we have. Skimping has become a sort of fashion. A sort of bad fashion.

"I got to thinking about it, Mr. President, and it occurred to me there was one simple step that might help.

"Isn't there some way that all the women in the country can be made to see how they can help Recovery? They say women do most of the buying—but most of the women I know have had the same 'skimping" idea I did—they haven't been buying as much as they used to.

"Can't women be made to see that when they don't buy as much as usual the merchant can't buy as much as ordinarily and the manufacturer doesn't produce as much as he normally would? It's easy to see how that causes unemployment and how women can help employment by beginning to buy again.

"This is just my own idea, and of course one family doesn't mean a lot, but I want to tell you that we have a new family policy at our house.

"We are not going to 'do without' any more. We are going to buy a number of things we need and do it right away. New clothes for the baby, some furnishings for the house—things like that.

"As I say—one family doesn't mean much. It's like a drop in the ocean. But there are millions of families who could do the same thing.

"If they all did, it seems to me, it might help quite a lot."

This woman is right. The stage is set. Men are back at work. Stores have taken on new help, stocked new goods. Everything is ready for a big buying wave.

We can't stop now. We have to act now. And action consists simply of buying things you need and want TODAY!

This is the second illustrated editorial—of a series now appearing in the Hearst Newspapers—on the importance of the Buy Now movement as a contribution to National Recovery.

Attorney Learns That All Evidence Is Against Siddall

Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan Production made by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

CHAPTER IV.

"He claims he hadn't seen Montagne since he broke with her some months ago. He says they parted the best of friends. He frankly admits that he made a settlement on her, and maintains she was perfectly satisfied. She certainly should have been; a hundred grand is heavy sugar these days. He says that they parted because he fell in love with Miss Sue Leonard. He tried like hell—I'll say this for the lad—to keep Miss Leonard's name out of it, but inasmuch as the engagement had been announced last week, her name had to come into it.

"He says that his telephone rang about midnight. He was in bed, but his valet had the night off, so there's no corroboration for that. It's true that his bed was rumpled up as though someone had been in it, but that seems immaterial. Anyway, he says that Miss Montagne was on the phone and asked him if he wouldn't come over to Crellman's apartment to see her. She said — according to Siddall's story—that she wanted to see him about something important.

"He tried to get her to tell him over the phone what it was, but she refused. He says he didn't know what to make of it, but thought it best to see her. She'd always been a square shooter, but he didn't know what was in her mind. Maybe she'd planned some sort of trouble, now that he was engaged.

"He went over there, thinking of course that she was alone—this is his story—and was surprised to find a bunch of people there. He says that Montagne made no reference to having phoned him, and that she was careful not to let him get her in a corner. So finally he asked her to go out on the porch with him. She went out and he asked her what she wanted. She denied having telephoned. He says he couldn't understand this."

Siddall's Story

Durant, who had been listless, leaned eagerly across the table. "Does he insist that it was Montagne who phoned?" he asked.

"That's the first screwy thing in his screwy story," replied the lieutenant. "He says he thought it was Mimi speaking over the telephone, and still thinks so. But, he says, she was so insistent that she hadn't sent for him that he can't be sure."

"What else did they talk about?" asked Durant.

"He says she wished him happiness in his coming marriage. She told him that she had seen him with Miss Leonard at Mont Blanc, the restaurant and night club where she was singing until last week. She congratulated him on winning such a nice girl. And right in the middle of her congratulations, she put her hand to her heart, took it away, and he saw that it was covered with blood. He seems to remember having heard a shot,

Synopsis

Jackson Durant has won socially unpleasant fame as an underworld lawyer and has been jilted by Sue Leonard, a pretty society girl. He has been drowning his sorrow. Layton, his faithful valet, has been politely remonstrating with him, stressing the evil of excessive drinking. Durant reads in the afternoon papers of the murder of Mimi Montagne, Broadway night club singer, for which Thomas Siddall, wealthy young broker, has been arrested. Durant's former fiancee calls and pleads with him to defend Siddall to whom she is now engaged. Durant interviews Police Lieut. Stevens, who divulges details of the murder which occurred on the terrace of a penthouse occupied by Jim Crellimann.

Speakers at the dedication were J. H. Frank, president; Mrs. I. S. Harris, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary; Rabbi Aaron M. Ashinsky, honorary vice president and charter member of the institution, and Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson.

Tonight at 8 o'clock memorial services will be held. The celebration will come to an end with the observance of Ladies' Auxiliary Day tomorrow afternoon.

Extent of possible reduction of the city budget cannot be determined until the exact amount of this year's deficit is known, Louis Wechsler, councilmanic candidate, said today.

"With the present trend in our social and economic laws, it is just as important that there be balanced representation of the two dominant parties on the bench as in the Legislature or Congress."

Pittsburgh Central Labor Union, the Independent Republican Organization of Etna, the Regular Republican Organization of Swissvale, the Croatian Political Club of McKeesport, and three other McKeesport groups—the Rusin Self-Culture Club, the Polish Civic Club and the Slovak Political Club have indorsed the candidacy of Robert A. Foley for jury commissioner.

Foley will speak today in Frick Teachers' Training School; Sterrett School, South Lang avenue, and Homewood Carnegie Library.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1931 C. M. Co.

G.O.P. Regulars Present Their Judicial Slate

—By MARK SHIELDS—

Mr. Shields

The Republican organization has come into the open with a partial judicial slate, which no longer leaves any doubt as to whether it will keep hands off in the contest for judge of the newly-created Juvenile Court, a promise which proponents of the court claim was made to them in Harrisburg last winter.

The organization will not keep hands off, and desires to add the patronage of this bench to the jobs it now controls in the city.

For a handbill distributed for the instruction of organization ward and district workers an advertisement has been prepared depicting the face of a voting machine and the buttons to be turned in order to vote for the judicial candidates favored by the Herron-Coyne organization.

It will appear tomorrow.

* * *

Two Vacancies Left On the Regular Ticket

Arrows point to the proper buttons, and the candidates favored are Republican County Chairman William H. Coleman and Judge Harry H. Rowand for Common Pleas Court, Judge Benjamin Lencher for County Court and Charles G. Lane, Jr., for Juvenile Court.

This leaves one vacancy for Common Pleas Court and one for County Court. In many sections the organization is furthering the candidacy of Raymond D. Evans for its third man for Common Pleas Court. In others County Judge M. A. Musmanno is being carried, and in some Attorney Alexander P. Lindsay or Assistant District Attorney Jack Haggerty.

The principal drive of that wing of the organization led by Senator Coyne is against Judge Ralph H. Smith, though Judge Smith is understood to have the unswerving support of District Attorney Andrew T. Park.

County Judge Frank Piekarski is not being carried by the organization, particularly on the South Side, where John J. McGrath, a ward chairman, is being supported. Mr. McGrath is under indictment by the Federal Court for alleged election frauds in the last national campaign.

* * *

First Open Approval Given Attorney Lane

For some time it has been understood that Mr. Lane would get the organization backing in preference to Gustav L. Schramm or Mrs. Lois D. McBride. The prepared advertisement of instruction to organization followers is the first tangible evidence of this effort by the regulars to make the new Juvenile Court, with its 250 jobs, a political prize.

It is understood that at the time the organization, through Senator Coyne, agreed to keep hands off in the Juvenile Court fight, there was no realization of the patronage powers of the court. With this lush field of preferment discovered the hands-off policy evaporated.

Democrats are extremely resentful of the invasion of their primary by Republican candidates. They have a right to be, for most offices, though common logic would indicate that, if there was militancy in the Democratic party in the past, and if its candidates were worthy, there would be no chance for Republican interlopers.

In this election there is resentment against judicial candidates running in the Democratic as well as Republican primaries, though in the party raiding bill, passed last session—and then vetoed by Gov. Pinchot at the instance of Judge John Fine, of Luzerne County—there was an express reservation permitting the judiciary to maintain some semblance of non-partisanship.

Candidates Queried About Party Stand

County Chairman David L. Lawrence and City Chairman John Murray sent out questionnaires to candidates, including those for the judiciary—asking them if they were enrolled Democrats, and intended to back Democratic candidates in the general election.

Attorney Andrew G. Smith, a Democrat, and a candidate for Common Pleas Court, in speeches has been resenting the intrusion of Republicans, six of the seven running in the Republican primary also being candidates for Democratic nominations. Dr. Marion McKay, president of the Civic Club of Allegheny County, in a statement Saturday, had some similar enunciation of party primary principles.

Theoretically the judiciary should be non-partisan, and a man's politics should have nothing to do with his fitness for the bench. The Democrats seem particularly annoyed at Judge Lencher, who, it must be admitted, was, before he went on the bench, an ardent Republican partisan.

But the two-party nomination for the bench can hardly be made an issue. It should have no place in bench elections, on the principle of party fealty alone.

And the protest of Dr. McKay as to party identity would have greater strength had not he, in the last congressional primaries, been a candidate in both Democratic and Republican lists.

Two Girls Fleeing Morganza Sought

Mary Estock, 16, of Clairton, and Betty Lanvre, 15, of Melrose Park, who escaped from the Pennsylvania Training School at Morganza late yesterday, were being sought throughout Western Pennsylvania today.

The girls are believed to have had outside aid in their dash for liberty. Police reported they had been seen riding in an automobile.

1 DEAD, 19 HURT, 3 HELD IN AUTO ACCIDENTS

Car Loaded With Girls And Boys in Crash; Ridge Kin Hurt

Struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Stanley Kasperowski, 4702 Hatfield street, while crossing Willow street, received injuries which caused his death a short time later in St. Francis Hospital.

En route home from a corn roast at West View, six young persons, including two girls, were injured early today when the automobile in which they were riding crashed into a car driven by Ralph Legrand, 24, of 5 Bellevue avenue, West View, in Perrysville avenue, near the city line. Legrand suffered slight injuries.

All were taken to Allegheny General Hospital by passing motorists.

4 HURT IN COLLISION

Joseph Ridge, 27, of 319 Central street, brother of Constable John Ridge, of the Fourth Ward, was injured seriously early today and three other men slightly hurt in a collision of automobiles at Beechwood boulevard and Forbes street.

Ridge had as a passenger Thomas Hansberry, of 144 Robinson street, chief clerk of the Civil Service Commission. Both were taken to the Elizabeth Steel Magee Hospital.

Walter Phillips, 46, of 2716 Stromberg street, South Side, and his passenger Peter Zelansky, of 6 Conklin street, were slightly injured. Phillips was arrested on a reckless driving charge.

Edward Cox, 37, of 4902 Cabinet way, Millvale, was in the West Penn Hospital today with injuries suffered when he was struck by an automobile in East Ohio street, Shaler Township, last night, according to a police report.

CARS AND TRUCK CRASH

Parks Jamison, 36, of 73 South Jackson street, Bellevue, and Foster Bland, of Thomas, W. Va., were treated at the Suburban General Tospital for lacerations of the head and face suffered in an automobile-truck collision in the Ohio River boulevard, near Kendall avenue, Bellevue, Saturday night, according to a hospital report.

Fed Karger, 30, of 629 Melwood street, and Martin O'Conner, of 4709 Mossfield street, were injured in a crash involving three cars in Bigelow boulevard, near Herron avenue, early yesterday morning, according to a police report.

C. W. Chatham, 66, of 430 Boggs avenue; Thomas Guttilla, 29, of Paulson avenue, and O'Connor, the drivers of the automobiles involved, were arrested on reckless driving charges, it was reported.

Howard Metcalf, 21, of 5437 Ellsworth avenue; Benjamin Buncher, of 711 Copeland street, and James Hurrey, of 5718 Howe street, were injured yesterday morning when Metcalf's automobile struck a tree in Washington boulevard, near Highland Park, according to a police report.

Mrs. Cecilia Bender, 47, of 221 Freeland avenue, was injured seriously, yesterday, when her husband's automobile ran into another in traffic at Bigelow boulevard and Herron avenue, police said.

Henry Assails Democratic and Republican Rivals as Products of Coyne's Machine

Primary to Decide Outcome of Fight, He Contends

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of a series of five articles in which each of the five mayoralty candidates has been invited by the Sun-Telegraph to write under his own signature his answer to this question: "Why do you think you should be elected Mayor of Pittsburgh?")

By JOHN M. HENRY

For the first time in many years the people of Pittsburgh have an opportunity to smash the power of the political machines, regain control of their own government, and apply to the municipal government of their city the principles of the new deal which Franklin Delano Roosevelt has given the nation.

A government by vicious political machines is as much a government without representation as that English tyranny which provoked the American Revolution. For when the vote of the independent electorate is nullified by crooked elections, the people have no representation in their government. And that is what has happened in Pittsburgh.

When political machines deprive the people of control of their government, the result is that the blood stream of municipal life is polluted and the very soul of the city is in danger of extinction. The pioneers whose courage and determination built this city in the wilderness would turn over in their graves if they could realize the deplorable state to which machine rule has brought the town they founded.

'Machine' Degrades City

For machine rule makes a town in which the gangster and the racketeer scoff at government; a city in which the rights of labor are suppressed by gigantic interests which walk hand in hand with the machine; a city in which the police force is composed of men degraded by political tyranny; a city where utilities charge what they please and find safety in their alliance with the machine; a city where the poor live in slums of unimaginable shame.

Give an uninterrupted reign to political machines and you have a town where business is taxed to death to support political payrolls; a town where firemen and policemen hold their jobs as political agents and not through efficiency. You have a city that is not a good place for men and women to live and to raise their children.

Go one step beyond this and you see the people of such a town deprived of representation at Harrisburg, denied the right to vote their own opinions on such matters as old age pension, the city manager bill, the metropolitan plan, the blue laws. And machine domination of Pittsburgh is necessary for the machine to control the Legislature which makes laws for Pittsburgh against the will and the wishes of the people of Pittsburgh.

The Mailed Fist!

You see a rotten political machine handing down its decree from the seats of the mighty, and at the feet of that machine you see a prostrate city in which democracy has died, a city ruled by a dictatorship whose mailed fist is more ruthless than any European dictatorship.

I am running for the Democratic nomination for Mayor of Pittsburgh because I believe the chance has come for the people to cast down this machine, to rise in their power and assume control of their own government.

There was no such chance four years ago. The entire nation rested supine beneath the rule of those who believe that government is run for the benefit of the special five per cent who control the wealth of the country and that the other 95 per cent of us should be content to obey orders.

People Are Aroused

But today the people are aroused. They have regained control of their government at Washington through the administration of Franklin Roosevelt, and they have seen that government can actually serve all the people.

By the same token they can regain control of the government of Pittsburgh. Although Mayor Herron is almost certain to get the Republican nomination, because opposition to him has been divided, they cannot regain control of their government by electing Mr. Herron. For Mr. Herron worships at the feet of the machine which has ruled the city so viciously these many years.

My opponent for the Democratic nomination is backed by the Guffey-Lawrence machine, which, although it bears a Democratic name, is actually the illegitimate offspring of the old Republican machine. Look beneath the surface paint of both machines and find their political trademark. You will find that both these steamrollers came from the Oakland factory of Senator James J. Coyne, and that both of them show the handiwork of the financial and utility interests who find Mr. Coyne a political boss exactly suited to their purposes.

Opposes 'Boss Coyne'

If either of these machine candidates win, the people lose. Remember that this campaign will be fought in the primary, not in the general election.

Last November, a vote for Franklin Delano Roosevelt was a vote against Hoover and all that the Hoover administration stood for.

A vote for me for the Democratic nomination for mayor is a vote against the machines of both parties, a vote against Boss Coyne and the rule of the utilities and financial powers.

If elected mayor, I pledge myself to make Pittsburgh a better city in which you and your children may live and work and play by smashing the rule of the machines and restoring government to the people.

PLAN PRAISED BY PITTSBURGH EXECUTIVES

Pennsy, Lake Erie and B. and O. All Laud NRA Campaign

From executives of railroads serving the Pittsburgh district today came complete accord with the Sun-Telegraph's "Spend in September and Buy American" campaign. They urged support of the recovery program through immediate purchase to enable Blue Eagle employers to put more people to work.

J. F. Deasy, vice president, Pennsylvania Railroad, said:

"Many people have returned to work in the last several months and now have money to spend. They should be encouraged to do their share to continue the upward turn in business and trade. Money does not have to be wasted or thrown away, but a reasonable part of income should be spent wisely for the things that have been wanted a long time and now are available at reasonable prices—prices which probably will be higher later on."

C. M. Yohe, vice president of the Pittsburgh and Lake Erie Railroad, commented:

"I am in hearty accord with the NRA plan to improve conditions through the medium of purchasing power. During the last three months we have returned to service a considerable number of our employes furloughed during the depression. Their personal requirements will be many and varied and will contribute their share of purchasing during the month of September."

E. A. Peck, general superintendent of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in this district, said:

"I think we should all back the movement. When the President and the Recovery Administration are trying to help us we should co-operate."

HENRY PLEADS FOR PARTY

John M. Henry, Democratic mayoralty aspirant, today appealed to voters to register as Democrats tomorrow, and vote for his nomination as a means of defeating the "Lawrence-Guffey machine," which is backing William N. McNair.

Predicting the nomination of Mayor John S. Herron by the Republicans, Henry said that there would be merely a choice between two machine candidates in November should McNair be nominated by the Democrats.

Adolph Edlis, former city treasurer, and chairman of the Roosevelt Independent Committee in 1932, also asked for a heavy Democratic registration, and reiterated his support of Henry.

FATHER, SON DIE IN TWO DAYS

John Lentz, 91, reputed to be the oldest Civil War veteran in the Allegheny Valley, died yesterday in his home in Cheswick a day after the death of his son, Harry Lentz, 67, in his home in Beaver.

The elder Mr. Lentz was a retired steel worker and at one time was a friend of Andrew Carnegie.

His son, retired, was a former superintendent of the Colonial Steel Company. He will be buried today. Funeral services for the elder Mr. Lentz will be held tomorrow in the Cheswick Presbyterian Church.

Seven Ministers Fill Pulpits Here

First Church, N. C. Milliron; Arlington Avenue, J. E. Clark; Fifty-second Street, J. M. Wanner; Franklin Street, P. E. Miller; Lorenz Avenue, C. E. Servbey; Madison, V. M. Saulk; Stanton Heights, I. W. Wanner.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Sept. 11.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Well, I guess I am all wet as usual, but a headline in all the papers like this don't particularly add to my patriotism, "Cuba Picks New President as Battleship Mississippi Steams Into Port," anymore than the following one would, "United States of America Having Internal Trouble and His Majesty King George has dispatched His Dreadnaughts to Stand By in New York Harbor to protect British investments in America, and to See That the Right Man Is Elected."

Will Rogers

But that couldn't happen, for they are both big nations, and would mean war. But when one nation is big, and one is little, the little nation's port is just like a public regatta. Everybody can come in that's got a boat.

The whole thing as I see it all over the world today is, that the little nations has got no business being little.

Yours, WILL.

FIGHT TO SAVE OLD ECONOMY

Extinction of the century-old village of Economy, now nearly lost in the Borough of Ambridge, can be prevented if a definite program to preserve the houses, tools and other equipment of the Economites is adopted, according to John S. Duss, former trustee of the Harmony Society.

A state appropriation for maintenance of the property is insufficient and the entire place is threatened with ruin, Duss said.

Joining in the plea for adoption of a rehabilitation program yesterday was Dr. Andrey Avinoff, director of Carnegie Museum. Dr. Avinoff and John S. O'Connor, business agent of the museum, recently visited the village.

CHURCH BACKS 'NEW DEAL'

The congregation of the Second Presbyterian Church gave a rising vote of support for the "New Deal" at the close of a sermon on "A New Deal for the Church" by the Rev. Dr. George W. Shelton, pastor, last night. Dr. Shelton said in part:

"All the forces available to a mighty nation are at work for the recovery of this country. Every sensible man and woman is supporting the President. But this depression that has befallen business generally also has attacked the church. All the forces of the church should be set to work to bring about recovery. The church must recoup its losses which have been enormous."

Profs Get Their Innings Before Gridiron Season

—By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER—

The brain trust seems to be doing all right with its thinkoretical ideas.

After all, a theory is an egg that must be hatched by a very practical hen. Electricity was only a theory when Ben Franklin proved you couldn't keep a paper kite dry in a thunder shower.

Same with the telephone and radio. First you grab the idea by the neck, twist it around like a kitchen mop and then start production.

So why begrudge the professors getting their innings before the football season opens? The sophomores will grab all the newspaper space for three months and the poor old profs will be forgotten like a rainy holiday.

After that Congress will convene. And those lads are very hardheaded, practical men who know which side their bread is bartered on.

From then on it will be a struggle between the academic mentality of the horny-handed industrialist. They say science will conquer brute strength, but we don't remember Sousa ever writing a march for it.

NEW VOTING MACHINES OPERATE EASILY

Election Judges to Assist If Citizens Are Puzzled

(Editor's Note—This is the first of a series of three articles detailing step-by-step the necessary procedure for each individual voter using the vote machines.)

Despite efforts of the Allegheny County Bureau of Elections to acquaint voters through public demonstrations and motion pictures in how to cast their ballot on a voting machine, thousands of citizens are expected to appear at the polls on primary election day, one week from tomorrow, unaware of the simple operaton.

The voting machines will be used in all Pittsburgh wards and the polling places of the three third class cities—McKeesport, Duquesne and Clairton.

OFFERS USE OF FILM

Elections Director W. T. Rees announced that a two-reel motion picture depicting each step of the machine's operations is available for public showing upon request. An election bureau representative will show the picture and answer all questions. Maj. Rees said the only requirement is assurance of an audience of 50 persons. Clubs, associations and any group may apply for the film at the Bureau of Elections, sixth floor, County Office Building.

Today's photograph illustrates the first steps necessary to operate a voting machine. When the election board has established a citizen's right to vote, the judge of election sets the machine for the party ticket under which the voter has registered. The machine locks all other tickets. A voter registered as a Republican cannot turn a candidate's button on the Democratic or any other ticket.

JUST PRESS BUTTON

The election judge must then press a control button extending from the machine to his table. The mechanism is ready for the voter who steps to the machine with curtains open. The voter then presses a button on the extreme left corner of the machine. This automatically closes the curtains. The machine then is ready for the citizen to cast votes by turning the candidate buttons.

The election law stipulates only two voters are permitted inside the rail at one time where one machine is in use. Four voters are permitted with two machines. A voter who does not understand the machine's operation may request instructions. Such instructions will be given by the judge of election with the curtains pulled back. Assistant County Solicitor Ralph H. Frank pointed out that these instructions cannot be misconstrued to mean assistance in voting.

RALPH H. FRANK MISS AGNES CALLAHAN

Asst. County Solicitor explaining the operation of a voting machine from a voter's point of view: The judge of election must for each voter manually set the party indicator pointed out at the top and then from his desk press a button (held in right hand) before the machine can be used. Miss Callahan's pressing the button each voter must press to close the curtains and complete the 'setting' of the machine each time. This is a Sun-Telegraph picture.

200,000 Buyers Pledge Aid to Blue Eagle

With 200,000 consumers' pledge cards already signed, the women's auxiliary of the local NRA committee has applied for 100,000 more at Washington, it was learned today at the NRA headquarters.

The 5,000 volunteer women workers will continue their house-to-house canvass in the Pittsburgh district in the interest of the Blue Eagle, urging immediate support of the recovery program through family purchases now, under the general chairmanship of Mrs. Oliver J. Haller.

Expressing confidence that next Friday's NRA Victory Day parade will be the largest in a decade here, former Gov. John S. Fisher, grand marshal, today said there was no danger of the parade being too short. He pointed out that, if anything, it would be too long, as a result of the response from labor, industries, merchants and patriotic organizations.

Already 20 musical organizations have volunteered to march, and the Building Trades Council has promised a large marching representation.

Walter Winchell ON BROADWAY

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Blanche Stuart Scott, of Rochester, N. Y., argues that she is the first woman in the U. S. to fly a plane and not Dr. Jessica Raiche. She adds that you may check this fact with Mrs. Lena Curtiss, widow of Glenn Curtiss. Miss Scott also wants you to know, in further defense of the claim, that her flight took place on October 22, 1910, at Fort Wayne . . . Why not refer her to Frederic Haskin's new tome, from which it was quoted? . . . If you can reach Sonia Karlov—A. H. Woods has a role for her in a play . . .

Here's the latest on the Weldon Heyburn-Greta Nissen marriage complications: Although they were photographed "sailing together" last week—he didn't. There was a stormy scene at the pier, and this time the bust-up is definite.

John Wilstach's new book "The Fate of Fay Delroy," attempts to recapture the old Broadway. You'll probably recognize all the thinly-veiled characters . . . The trouble at the Atlantic Beach Club because "Prince" Romanoff crashed it—has resulted in a bulletin there, urging members to be careful of their guests. Dudley Field Malone, who brought Romanoff, is sore about it . . . Bobby Connolly, the dance director, will have several incidents in his career kidded in the new Schwab show . . . Mrs. Jessie Costello is living in a 58th street hotel—and signs more autograph albums than most celebrities. You ought to see her comments in them . . .

The papers persist in calling Janet Snowden's "brief-moment" Prince Caravita—his name really is Prince Francesco.

There will be a lawsuit because the same article appeared in "Europa" and "Blast," the literary mags. What makes it all ridiculous is that "Blast" is pro-Bolshevik and the other is pro-everything, but! . . . J. Eugene Chrisman, Western editor for Fawcett, is sorry you didn't remember his name when orchiding "the best of the Garbo" biographies. It was such a good notice—he would appreciate the credit. . . . Harry Richman's loyalty to his one-time accompanist, Jack Golden, resulted in Golden's orchestra getting the job on Harry's new air show. He wouldn't sign until they agreed to that . . . I applaud that, sir . . . Now the humble sandwich man has become "big business" in New York . . . A new company rents space on animated billboards, and young boys, dressed like Roxy ushers parade upper-Broadway bearing three colored signs on their backs.

Producers of legitimate shows expect to get Sunday performances out of the NRA . . . They expect that break out of the "unfair competitions" section of the code—since the movies, burlesk and special concerts are allowed to gather in the coin on Sundays . . . The one man Tammany really fears at the coming election is Samuel Seabury, who has more dynamite than ever—left-over evidence he didn't use at the last investigation that upset so many biggies . . . It is also the reason why one of the potential candidates decided to go into another business . . . Here's an unusual guy. Cecil Yapp (what a monicker!) for years one of the better character actors at the Guild, came into plenty of money not long ago . . . And he has spurned jobs offered by various producers—on the ground that some actor who really needs the job might get it . . . Will Gordon tackles the toughest jobs. He has taken over the amusement pages of The Chief, which never had them before . . .

There is no romance between Myrna Loy and Ramon Novarro—it was started to cover up another.

The comment on Estelle Taylor having to take a screen test for Metro wasn't explicit. It read as though it was a reflection on her ability. In Hollywood, more than ever, the biggest stars have to take tests, rather than suffer the humiliation of being taken out of the cast after the picture is started . . . Ann Harding, Bebe Daniels and numerous others have recently taken tests for roles, which were played by others. Estelle wishes you'd so state . . . Here's one difficult to believe, but it happened out there during the strike . . . They were making "The Worst Woman in Paris" and a striking cameraman, who also is a pilot, kept swooping down over the set—in the hope of spoiling the sound. But—he chose a sequence that helped it! Thus Fox saved $250 for plane noises it would have used . . . Janet Gaynor is due in town . . . If the plan now being plotted goes through it will mean the finish for many small movies. The code will demand that movie houses playing double features will have to omit one! Making it tougher on the consumer, what? . . . Jack La Rue's right name is Lo Bue. He's Italian.

Mr. Peer, president of the Southern Music Co., called. Concerning that youth in Cincy, who claims authorship of "Lazy Bones." . . . Mr. Peer offers these facts from the writers of it, Johnny Mercer and Hoagy Carmichael: that Ben Bernie had it demonstrated to his crew at the Paramount here March 17—but the Cincinnati boy claims he wrote it about May 1, which is when he is supposed to have sent it to the Southern Music Co. The title was taken from the lyric of "Snowball," written much earlier . . . And here's more proof that the Cincy lad is wrong—the strain was borrowed from Hoagy's old hit, "Washboard Blues," which Whiteman recorded in 1928—and if anybody wants to go back further than that then get a record made by Gennett of the same tune made in 1925. The composers of "Lazy Bones" confess taking the tune from Hoagy's "Washboard Blues," which ought to put a stop to all that annoying yelling by the boy . . . They hate bothering you like this, they add, but inasmuch as you called attention to it first, they feel you will offer their side of it, which I said you would.

Bobby Sanford has the theatrical end of Loring M. Black's campaign for mayor. . . . Tommy Guinan and Sally O'Neil will remain friends and won't be wed . . . He arrived on the coast with his pockets stuffed with $1,000 bills. . . . Princess Pignatelli threw a party there for Texas, inviting several girls, not one of whom showed up—leaving the party with 10 men for every doll. Peggy Joyce finally helped out. . . . Will you in a spare moment please explain how anybody could produce a play such as "The Sell-Out" at the Cort? . . . A Mr. Cagney, no kin to the movie menaces, phoned. He considers this news—he was at Minsky's—where they have several good ideas, but they wear no clothes. . . . And the one girl who stopped the show cold, was a lass who didn't remove a thing! . . .

The fan mags are linking June Knight with Buddy Rogers—which shows you how wrong they can be. . . . A story broke in a new West Coast theatrical daily that you and Billy Seeman had a fight in a night club. Gosh, what inaccuracy! The story is at least three years old, and you weren't the columnist involved. Poor Louie—he never gets any credit.

Your Girl Friday.

Frances, Joel Reported Engaged

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1933, King Features Synd., Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, Sept. 11.—They tried to talk me out of announcing it, but Frances Dee and Joel McCrea are engaged.

Hot after a report that Hollywood's most romantic sweethearts would marry during a three weeks vacation from the studio, I called Frances on the phone at Malibu.

Miss Dee

Joel answered. I asked him if they were engaged. He referred me to Frances. To the direct question, she said:

"Yes, I suppose we are."

After that, she tried to tell me that Joel hadn't given her a ring, and Joel tried to tell me that they'd known each other only for two months, but the admission was out.

There's no doubt that these two are seriously in love and intend to marry. Joel always has said that he never would marry an actress. But he admits he has changed his mind now. It wouldn't surprise me to see them take the step any day now. But the best I could get out of them was:

"We'll be sure and let you know."

Jim Davis, who keeps the stars in shape at Paramount, has figured out that Mae West has the identical proportions of Venus de Milo.

Miss West

Told of this, Mae's swell retort was:

"That may be so, but I have it on the Venus because I have two arms and know how to use them. Besides I'm not marble."

* * *

Actually, the West figure is free of fat. When the blonde star came out here to make her first picture, she went to Davis and suggested taking off a few pounds around the hips and bust. He advised her to let nature's curves alone, but to take some extra ounces off the back and waist. An inveterate early riser, Mae got up at 7 a. m. to take exercises and repeated in the evening. Davis says she showed more endurance than any man he has ever trained. The West muscles are strong, too. She lifted the 180-pound Davis off the floor with one arm.

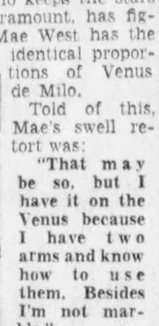
Remember the epoch-making scene where James Cagney hit Mae Clarke in the face with a grapefruit in "The Public Enemy?"



Miss Clarke

When Mae reported for work the other day in another Cagney picture, she found in her dressing room a whole crate of grapefruit. An attached card read:

"For internal use only. James Cagney."

Marlene Dietrich has stopped all further publicity on the gowns she had made in Paris. Wonder if she's changed her mind about giving up the trousers or if she's merely planning a grand entrance . . . There's a story behind the cancellation (by mutual consent) of Arlene Judge's contract at RKO. Arlene was sent to another studio for a picture and refused to do a certain scene as described . . . Kleig eyes are making an appearance in Hollywood again. Irene Dunne's got them, so has Jack Dempsey.

To avoid holding up the "Dancing Lady" company, MGM is shooting closeups of Joan Crawford, whose ankle is too badly swollen to do dancing scenes. It's no uncommon practice, y'now, for stars to wear bed-room slippers when making closeups.

'Tarzan'

Author Likes 'Penthouse' Picture

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

I think "Penthouse" is a corking picture. I was excited, thrilled and amused, and considering that I wrote the novel on which the picture is based, I consider that high praise. After all, the characters, the plot, the incidents, were a thrice-told tale to me.

I dictated the novel. Then I corrected the typewritten pages. Then I read the story over to see if it needed changes. Then I read the proofs sent me by Cosmopolitan Magazine. Then I looked it over in the magazine.

Yet last night I saw the picture and discovered that I was in a high state of excitement. I wondered how the deuce Durant would extricate Siddal from his terrible predicament; I wondered if Durant would fall in love with Gertie—in short, I acted and felt exactly as I act and feel when I'm looking at a picture of which I know nothing in advance, when I happen to enjoy the picture.

The thing an author always looks for when he watches a picture made from his own story are the departures from plot and incident and characterization which have been made.

I found no departures in "Penthouse." If the picture "Penthouse" has a bad plot, then my plot for the novel was bad; if the incidents are bad, then my incidents were bad; if the characterization is poor, then my characterization was poor.

Because "Penthouse," the picture, follows "Penthouse," the novel, with remarkable fidelity, Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett, the screen authors, did a corking piece of work, and Mr. Van Dyke's direction is, I think, superb. I must add a word of commendation, too, for the excellent results achieved by the associate producer, Hunt Stromberg.

As for the acting, I can only offer praise. Warner Baxter is exactly what Durant ought to be, and Miss Myrna Loy is, I think, better than my original Gertie. Nat Pendleton as Gazzotti, is a remarkable bit of characterization, and Charles Butterworth as the butler is excellent. It really is unfair to pick out any individual member of the cast, for I happened to think they all were great.

Actor Clicks As Writer

Ralph Graves has devised a new way to earn a trip to the Chicago World's Fair. Sitting down to his typewriter, he knocked out a story, "The Fair," which he submitted to 20th Century Pictures' scenario department.

Darryl Francis Zanuck bought it at sight for production by 20th Century and United Artists release. Graves is now taking in the sights at the Fair.

This is the second story Graves has sold to the new Joseph M. Schenck-Darryl Zanuck Company. His previous sale was "Born to Be Bad." He also sold another story, "Style," to Edward Small's Reliance Pictures Company, which, like 20th Century, releases through United Artists.

Graves, well known as an actor, has evidently deserted the Thespian ranks to devote his time to writing.

Hollywood Celebrity In West Film

Mae West met a Hollywood celebrity, Edward Anthony Browne, writer, newspaperman, blade-about-Hollywood and famed as the character "Whitey" in the books, "Queer People" and "Whitey," by Carroll and Garrett Graham. "Whitey" turned up as an extra player in Miss West's Paramount production, "I'm No Angel," and an introduction was effected.

Silly Symphony Gets Four Melodies

"Lullaby Land," the newest Walt Disney Silly Symphony to be released by United Artists, deals with the sub-conscious mind of a baby, who is shown frolicking with all the forbidden things denied it while it is awake.

The same staff of composers which delighted picture audiences with "Who's Afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" in Disney's "Three Little Pigs," has provided four new melodies for "Lullaby Land."

Etting Song Too Good

While Busby Berkeley was staging the huge slave market scene that centers around Ruth Etting as she sings "No More Love" in Samuel Goldwyn's "Roman Scandals," starring Eddie Cantor, he found it impossible to receive the proper attention from the hundreds of extras who appear in the number.

Time and again they stumbled, missed their cues or just stood still. Finally, an explanation was forthcoming. The bit players were so moved by the way Ruth Etting sang "No More Love" that they forgot all about their cues or even the scene itself.

"Roman Scandals" will be released by United Artists.

Double Debut For Blossom

Blossom Seeley, musical comedy star, signed the other day to replace Lilyan Tashman in Walter Winchell's "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," has been given a long-term contract.

Miss Seeley's first day's work in "Broadway Thru a Keyhole," soon to be released by United Artists, was so satisfactory that, in addition to giving her a new contract, Darryl Francis Zanuck also cast her in the George Bancroft starring vehicle, "Blood Money," now in production, writing a complete new part for her.

Miss Seeley will thus have the distinction of making her screen debut in two pictures, "Broadway Thru a Keyhole" and "Blood Money." She had a dramatic introduction to the screen, as she was pressed into service following the collapse of Miss Tashman, who had already replaced the ailing Peggy Hopkins Joyce on the "Broadway Thru a Keyhole" set.

Plays and Players :: By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Things just go 'round in a circle in the theater as elsewhere. Now we have beer mixed with entertainment in many parts of the country, including Pittsburgh. The beverage nook in the Variety may be thought to be the first approach to the English music hall in the state, but it isn't. Music halls were plentiful in this commonwealth prior to the passage of the Brooks high license law. Just to mention two, oldtimers recall Vierhaller's and Tivoli Garden, both in Diamond street, the Tivoli occupying part of the site of the present Warner. Vierhaller's was on the opposite side of the street a little further down. They presented the same variety of entertainment that cabarets do now, only the presentation was neither so elaborate nor ornate. One even put on boxing bouts occasionally, and was the headquarters of the sporting men of the town. Yes, indeed, things just go 'round in a circle.

The Stage Guild will give its first performance in the city limits Thursday night, when it will stage a play by Madeleine Skelly Foust in St. Francis' Auditorium as a benefit for St. Francis' Hospital. Incidently it will be the last production of this group, that held forth throughout the summer in Oakmont, part of the time at the Willows. Mrs. Foust's play is titled "The Dragon's Tooth," and it deals with a newspaper columnist. In the cast will be Helen Verosky, Alexander Kann, Lee Dashbaugh, Clarissa Gailliot, Mary Clancey, Martin Fallon, John McQuade, Roy Swan, Viola Brosky, Don Sanker, Betty Succop and Mary Joe Lippert.

The Summer Playhouse closed its season Saturday night in Arnold School with the final performance of "Dangerous Corner," sixth in a series of plays given every two weeks. The season was a success artistically and otherwise, and the audiences found much enjoyment in the plays, which included "Springtime for Henry," "Second Man," "He," "Goodbye Again," "Three to Make Ready" and "Dangerous Corner." Not any of them had ever been given here previously. "Three to Make Ready" was the premiere production of a play by a Pittsburgh writer, Helen Mason.

All in a Day

The Columnist Interviews Himself

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—Not much in the way of news today. I don't feel in the mood for a long story.

Things being as dull as they are, then, I'll subject myself to an imaginary interview. I wrote my last column along these lines as my boat was rolling through the Suez Canal—and so long as I wasn't fired by wireless, I guess I can try it again. I'm a man who will try anything twice, with the exception of pickled herring.

INTERVIEWER:—Good morning, Mr. Hellinger.

COLUMNIST:—What's good about it?

COLUMNIST:—The front door.

INTERVIEWER:—Everybody learns by experience. What did you learn in the hospital?

COLUMNIST:—The names of 50 horses.

INTERVIEWER:—Did you ever pick a winner?

INTERVIEWER:—Who is your favorite movie star?

COLUMNIST:—Lee Tracy.

INTERVIEWER:—Why?

COLUMNIST:—He's the only one I ever go to see.

INTERVIEWER:—What's the funniest sight you ever saw?

INTERVIEWER:—If you had your life to live over again, what would you be?

COLUMNIST:—Wiser.

INTERVIEWER:—What, in your opinion, is the best way to break into the newspaper business?

COLUMNIST:—Have your father the owner of a newspaper.

INTERVIEWER—Do you think that, as a rule, blondes are more attractive than brunettes?

COLUMNIST:—If I know what's good for me, I'll think so.

INTERVIEWER:—While in China, did you meet Ah Sing and Hip Foo?

COLUMNIST:—No. It must have been a couple of other yellows.

INTERVIEWER — What is the greatest difficulty you have encountered in recent years?

COLUMNIST — Getting my pants on over a cast.

INTERVIEWER — What, in your opinion, is the most improved act on the air today?

COLUMNIST—Phil Baker.

INTERVIEWER — Have you any reason for saying that?

COLUMNIST — Yes, I really think so. And, besides, Baker owes me $20.

INTERVIEWER—Plastic surgery is no longer discussed as it once was. Do you know why?

COLUMNIST — Yes. People have stopped cutting off their noses to spite their face.

INTERVIEWER — That's an old gag. Don't you know any new ones?

COLUMNIST—Not for this column.

INTERVIEWER — You have traveled extensively. What is the most perfectly preserved relic you have seen?

COLUMNIST—Texas Guinan.

INTERVIEWER — Do you think you will ever revive your old vaudeville act?

COLUMNIST—No. The city authorities would never let me dig that far.

INTERVIEWER:—Where are you going on your next trip?

COLUMNIST:—The interior of South America.

COLUMNIST: — That's why I'm going.

INTERVIEWER: — Who do you think will win the American League Pennant next year?

COLUMNIST:—The St. Louis Browns.

INTERVIEWER:—Why?

COLUMNIST:—I like to be different.

INTERVIEWER:—Don't you think you're talking too much about yourself these days?

COLUMNIST:—Certainly. And I've got to keep it up, too.

INTERVIEWER:—Why?

COLUMNIST:—They told me that, unless I talked about myself, I'd be fired from the columnists' union.

INTERVIEWER:—Does anyone vote "no" in the columnists' union?

COLUMNIST:—No. Everyone votes "I."

INTERVIEWER:—What is your favorite drink?

COLUMNIST:—Brandy and soda without.

INTERVIEWER: — Without what?

COLUMNIST:—Without soda.

INTERVIEWER:—Well, it's getting late. Mr. Hellinger, I'll have to be moving along. I have just two more questions.

COLUMNIST:—Shoot.

INTERVIEWER: — Do you think a young swain's most difficult task is when he pops the question?

COLUMNIST:—No. I think it's more difficult when he questions the pop.

INTERVIEWER: — Do you find it easy to get material for your column?

COLUMNIST: — If I did, would I be doing a column like this?

INTERVIEWER:—Well, so long. Hope I'll see you again some time.

COLUMNIST:—Not if I see you first . . .

BATHING BEAUTY 'FAKE' CHARGED

Universal Service.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 11.—Charges and counter charges were flying last night at 29 disappointed contestants in the national beauty pageant and their sponsors boarded trains for home.

Hal Oliver, who sponsored "Miss Greater New York," and authorized her withdrawal from the contest before the final decision, reiterated charges that "ringers" were used instead of bona fide contestants. He said:

"I have affidavits from three girls who were not chosen in contests, but who were appointed by one of the officials of the pageant. Two of those girls have never seen the state they represented."

Miss Connecticut, a platinum blonde, Marion Begeron, of West Haven, was selected Saturday as Miss America 1933.

NRA Sends 20,000 To N. Y. Schools

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—More than 1,130,000 children filed into classrooms of New York today for the first day of school. An estimated 20,000 of them were there because of NRA's ban on child labor.

Most of the children formerly employed returned to junior and senior high schools or continuation schools.

Hanging 'Corpse' Turns Out to Be Dry Effigy

Answering calls from startled motorists that a body was hanging from the West Penn Railways Company bridge over Hartman street, police found the "victim" to be an effigy of a famous temperance advocate of former years. The dummy bore this legend:

"Here lies Pussyfoot Johnson. The Eighteenth Amendment will be dead."

3 IN MISSING GYRO HUNTED

International News Service.

MICHIGAN CITY, Ind., Sept. 11.—Coast Guard cutters were dragging Lake Michigan near this city today for the autogyro plane which disappeared last Wednesday with H. E. Manning, Charles T. Otto and Miss Majenta Gerard aboard.

The plane, piloted by Otto, started on a cross lake flight from South Bend, Ind., to Chicago and was last seen near the shore. Coast Guardsmen dragged a mile square area here yesterday with no results.

KAHN'S EX-WIFE IN PLUNGE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Injured when she fell from the third floor bedroom window of her Park avenue apartment, Mrs. Anne Whelan Kahn, tobacco heiress and former wife of Gilbert W. Kahn, son of the international banker, today was reported resting fairly comfortably at Harbor Hospital.

Mrs. Kahn, who was divorced from her husband in Reno eight months ago, suffered internal injuries and a fracture of the hip in the fall.

According to Agnes Dyer, a nurse and friend of the tobacco heiress, they had just returned from a Canadian vacation trip. Mrs. Kahn seemed tired and Miss Dyer suggested she go to bed and rest. Miss Dyer said she started to leave the room, turned and saw Mrs. Kahn tumble through the window. She attempted to halt the fall, but lost her grip on Mrs. Kahn's clothing. The nurse said:

"Apparently she felt faint, went to the window for a breath of air, fainted and fell."

AS A PIRATE BACK IN 1927 . . . SHIPPED TO KANSAS CITY

SPORT COMMENT

By James J. Long

Jock's Worries Reduced. Klein Obstacle to Trades. Shotton Has Good Record.

Tennis Grand Slam Missed. Golf Tourney Uncertain. Gates Aid to Duquesne.

PITT WELL FORTIFIED AT MOST POSTS

As Jock Sutherland starts his tenth year as head football coach at the University of Pittsburgh, with practice getting under way today on the campus, he can marshal his thoughts, take a squint at his team roster, and then eliminate several positions that will not cause him very much worry during the approaching season. Right now it appears that no matter what players earn the starting berths, Pitt is going to be well fortified at the tackles, guards, fullback and at least one end.

Johnny Meredith

Sutherland has four men available for the tackle posts this fall, which isn't at all bad. One member of this quartet, John Love, won his insignia in 1931. All of the others saw plenty of service last year. The three are Johnny Meredith, slated to fill Paul Cuba's shoes on the left side of the line, and Frank Walton and Bob Hoel, who will battle it out for the right tackle position. In addition, there is Stanley Olejnicsak, smart defensive tackle, to help Meredith. And the good line material is not confined to the tackle berths. The 1932 guards, Tar Onder and Doc Hartwig, also will have to hustle to hold their jobs.

THIRD-STRINGER BIDS FOR REGULAR POST

Not only will Kenny Ormiston, a letter man and Hartwig's sub last year, be after one of the guard positions, but Frank Kutz, a third-stringer during the 1932 campaign, has come to life, and if he continues the good work he did in spring practice he can't be kept out of the starting lineup. This makes no allowance for Art Detzel, ace of the sophomore line crop, a husky, hard-blocking guard from Erie.

An even more encouraging situation exists at fullback, where the Panther mentor may have to flip a coin to determine his eventual starting choice. Izzy Weinstock, husky Jewish lad, was the regular last fall, but his rival, the speedy Heinie Weisenbaugh, from Tarentum, was coming along so rapidly at the close of the season that he is certain to give Weinstock a hard fight. Weisenbaugh did almost all of Pitt's ground gaining in the Tournament of Roses debacle last January.

WILLING TO TRADE WITH PHILS—FOR KLEIN

President Gerry Nugent is making the western trip with the Phillies for the avowed purpose of conferring with other club owners in all the cities visited and assembling ideas looking to the strengthening of the Quakers for 1934. In short, he aims to cook up some deals to be put through during the winter.

No doubt Nugent will find his fellow magnates at all points thoroughly in sympathy with his plans to make changes in the Phils and more than willing to talk trade with him. It's quite the thing to do, they'll tell him, and they'll all have just the kind of material to trade that will help him. But when the matter of terms comes up, the other party to the bargaining will casually mention a guy named Klein, and that will be the end of it.

CRITCISM OF SHOTTON VOTED UNFAIR

Speaking of the Phils, the criticism that has been aimed at Manager Burt Shotton for the club's disappointing showing is pronounced unfair by many baseball men, and they do not believe there is any ground for the rumors that Shotton will be dismissed in favor of a new leader in Quakertown next year. If there is, they can't see the justice of it.

Burt Shotton

Shotton, it is argued, has done about as well in his six years on the job as any other manager could have done under similar circumstances, with players like Pinky Whitney, Hal Lee, Lefty O'Doul, Ray Benge and others being sold over his head because the club needed money. He developed a lot of good men in Whitney, Lee, Benge, Virgil Davis, Phil Collins, Don Hurst besides the great Chuck Klein, and made profitable trades in acquiring Dick Bartell and Chick Fullis and in outsmarting everybody by

ROSS FAVORED TO DEFEAT TONY AGAIN

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—While Barney Ross, champion, and Tony Canzoneri, challenger and former champion, were quoted at even money today for their 15-round lightweight title fight here tomorrow night, Ross was the choice of most boxing writers and experts.

Benny Leonard, former champion, picked the Chicagoan. Joe Jacobs, manager of Max Schmeling, said Ross would win by a knockout in the twelfth round.

A gate of $150,000 was expected by Promoter Tim O'Mara. The New York Milk Fund for Babies will share in the receipts.

While the fighters finished off their long training drills at camps in New Jersey, there was no general betting favorite. They were quoted at even money or 9 to 10 and "take your pick."

Not since Lew Tendler, of Philadelphia, made his second assault on the title of Benny Leonard, 10 years ago last July, have boxing fans been so agitated over a lightweight battle here. The advance ticket sale was well past $50,000 today. This is more than $15,000 in excess of the net receipts at the bout in Chicago in which Ross won the crown from Canzoneri. The capacity of the Polo Grounds is 48,000 and a sell-out would mean a gate of $225,000.

LEVINSKY QUITS CAMP

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—King Levinsky quit his outdoor camp at Grand Beach, Mich., and moved to Chicago today to put the finishing touches on the lefts and rights he hopes will stop the comeback campaign of Jack Sharkey, deposed heavyweight champion, in a 10-round bout here Friday.

PANTHER GRID SQUAD OUT

Fall training got under way today for two additional district varsity squads. Pitt's gridders reported this morning to Head Coach Jock Sutherland on the Pitt practice field on the hill above the Stadium, while at Greenville, Jack Stoeber took charge of the Thiel College hopefuls.

A squad of 60 players reported to Coach Sutherland, and Jock promptly put his stalwarts through a signal drill. He selected a tentative first team with Hogan and Munjas alternating at quarter, Sebastian and O'Dell at the halves, Weinstock and Weisenbaugh alternating at fullback, Rooker and Skladany at the ends, Meredith and Walton at tackle, Hartwig and Onder at guard and Shotwell at center.

There is a strong possibility that this lineup will be altered but little throughout the season.

At the conclusion of the signal drill, Rooker, Hogan and Munjas were put through a punting practice, and Onder, Weisenbaugh and O'Dell were given a place-kicking workout.

The athletes, quartered at Webster Hall, will engage in morning and afternoon workouts each day.

DUKES EXPECT TOUGH GRID CAMPAIGN

By JESS CARVER

The gallop of Duquesne University's Dukes through the 1934 football campaign, which figures to be a rough one at best, already has struck rocky going.

Shrewd Elmer Layden, as cagey as they come and seldom given to the emitting of undue yelps of pessimism, has just cause for grief as he surveys the situation as it confronts his hopefuls less than one week before the opening game against the formidable Waynesburg Yellow Jackets.

So far little has gone right with Elmer and his Dukes. The problem that caused Layden the most worry even before training camp opened, the quarterback question, has become acute. The torrid weather has prevented the athletes from attaining the desired physical form (most of the lads are under weight and too finely drawn) and to make matters worse, five standout backfield men have succumbed to the injury jinx.

DeCOSTER ON BENCH

It looks now very much as if the Dukes would have to put on the "whistling post the graveyard act" as far as the quarterbacking for the inaugural with the Yellow Jackets is concerned. Frank DeCoster, he of the barking voice, heavily counted upon for regular duty at quarter, developed a foot infection soon after camp opened, and last week, just when it appeared he was ready to don a uniform, he was rendered further hors de combat when an infection developed on one of his fingers.

Joe Gates, sophomore quarterback, who looked like the money in spring practice and a chap Layden figured would come along fast this fall, has not done so. He has Layden guessing. It may be that he's just finding it a bit difficult to combine the responsibilities of field generaling with the more mechanical duties of taking 'em out and keeping 'em out. Joe may come along over night and make life more worth living for the Laydens and the Bachs.

The remainder of the backfield, once Jim McDonald, Steve Marin, Dick Nussbaum and Jim Filingham recover from their boils, injured legs and what not, should be a pip. Zaninelli (pressed hard for the job by Jim Campbell and Art Strutt) has the first grab on the fullback job, and the veteran Al De Luca is a sure pop for left half, where he can pass and run his way to additional fame and additional Duquesne touchdowns.

LINE PROSPECTS GOOD

Coach Joe Bach may be losing some sleep over the condition of the line, but he's not losing any weight, and indeed, he has little cause for the dropping of any

ARKLE, HUGUS WIN TITLE

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

B. F. Arkle and Wright Hugus, resourceful Wheeling pair, thrilled a large gallery yesterday afternoon by downing the youthful P. A. A. stars, Billy O'Loughlin and Wally Arensberg, 6-3, 6-4, 4-6, 3-6, 8-6, in the final round of the third annual Allegheny Country Club invitation turf court men's doubles net tournament.

Arkle's deep, severe and consistent volleying was the outstanding feature of the contest, though Hugus seemed ever ready with cagy angle shots and pretty retrieves in the pinches.

Arkle and Hugus were down seriously in their morning semi-final with the Fox Chapel stars, Tom Robinson and Stan Brown, but managed to win at 5-7, 6-3, 8-6. O'Loughlin and Arensberg upset the seeding in the penultimate bracket by thumping Frank Broida and Irvin Goodman, 6-4, 6-2.

Frank McClintock and Frank White, nosed out Hub Rinehart and Don Mattern, 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, for consolation laurels.

The initial Stanton Heights invitation clay court men's doubles tennis tournament will get under way on the North Aiken lot next Friday afternoon, according to announcement of Chairman John D. Beatty yesterday.

PERRY TAKES U. S. CROWN

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The flower of American tennis, once flourishing in every clime, was wilted about the edges today, and no water in sight.

Frederick J. Perry, dashing young British star, held this country's most coveted title, the national championship, and recovery of the Davis Cup seemed further away than at any time since the French captured it at Germantown in 1927.

Perry, hero of Great Britain's successful challenge for the cup in Paris in July, completed his all-conquering campaign with a blistering five-set victory over Jack Crawford, of Australia, in the final match of the championships at Forest Hills yesterday.

Fourteen thousand spectators, sitting in unhappily at the first all-foreign final since Rene La Coste and Henri Cochet, of France, fought it out in 1926, saw the athletic, versatile Perry tire Crawford out in the first three bitterly played sets and then overwhelm him in the last two. The scores were 6-3, 11-13, 4-6, 6-0, 6-1.

For the most part the players remained deep in their own courts, exchanging crisp backhand shots to the far corners and moving in only when there was a chance for a forcing shot.

Nobody seemed to know what happened to Crawford between the third and fourth sets. He looked strong as he won the third and took the lead, and when Perry raced through the fourth set without the loss of a game, the Crawford fans still were undisturbed.

CLUBS TO PLAY BARGAIN BILL TOMORROW

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

The showers of today caused a postponement of the Pirate-Dodger doubleheader scheduled at Forbes Field. As a result of the cancellation of this afternoon's program, a dual bill will be staged by the same clubs tomorrow afternoon. The original playing chart called for a single contest tomorrow.

The rain postponement may entirely wash one of the contestants' scheduled games off the books entirely. The present jaunt is the last the Dodgers are listed for in Pittsburgh. In the event that one of the "money" positions of the National League race is contingent upon the washed out contest, the Brooklyn team might be compelled to return here on an open date to run off the contest.

MAY BE CANCELED

Pirate officials this afternoon stated they were inclined to the opinion that the game would be canceled permanently. To force the Dodgers to return here from the East in the last week of the season would entail considerable expense and John A. Heydler, league president, would hesitate before he would order such a playoff. A decision on the matter is due in the course of the next few days.

Gerald P. (Gerry) Nugent, new president of the Phillies, paid a surprise visit to the Pirate headquarters at noon and immediately there were visions of a swap between the Pirates and Quakers, with Chuck Klein as the anticipated Pittsburgh prize.

Nugent went into a conference with Messers Benswanger and Gibson, but when the conference ended both sides denied they had opened negotiations looking toward a trade. Nugent said he was here in the interest of Sunday baseball. A vote on the big question slated for this fall and the officials of the two Pennsylvania clubs desire to merge their interests in a comment cause.

It is known, however, that the Phillies would like to make some swaps. They made one several weeks back that put the Braves in the flag race for some time, the Phillies reaping a fifinancial reward as they allowed Pinkey Whitney and Hal Lee to move to Boston for Wes Schulmerich and Fritz Knothe and a lot of cash. The Buccos naturally would like to pick up Klein, and they might be interested in one or two of Shotton's best pitchers.

Bill Swift limited the Dodgers to five hits as the Pirates copped the first game of yesterday's dual bill in the Flatbush, 2 to 1. Swift had a slab foeman worthy of his steel in Walter Beck, who yielded but six hits.

Two misplays by Linus Frey, rookie shortstop who was so impressive at Forbes Field Saturday, gave the Pirates both runs in Swift's game.

ERRORS BRING DEFEAT

The Pirates had another 2-1 verdict in their favor as the last half of the ninth inning of the second battle arrived, but Hal Finney gummed up things on a pop fly to aid in the tying run, and Vaughan's misplay contributed to the score that gave the Dodgers a 3-2 success at the eleventh hour.

Two pitchers and a shortstop have been added to the Pirate family. The pitchers are Lloyd Johnson, a left hander secured from the San Francisco Pacific Coast League team, and Johnny Connolly, a right hander from the Springfield Mid-Atlantic League team.

The shortstop is Tony Malinosky, purchased from the Tulsa club of the Texas League, who has been playing with the Pine Bluff club in the Dixie League. The trio will report for spring training next year.

KENWOOD COUNTRY CLUB, CINCINNATI, Sept. 11. — Gus Moreland, the young man from Texas, and Pat Sawyer, the young man from Minneapolis, today declared themselves in no uncertain terms in shooting a pair of 72s, to lead the early scorers in the first 18 holes of the National Amateur golf championships qualifying round. Playing together, they came down to the finish in a dead heat, Moreland having to take up the slack of a very slovenly start which saw him take a 6 on the first hole.

Sawyer a serious young man hiding his light behind a pair of pedagogic lens, is the Minnesota state champion. He is 20 years old, both of these bellwethers being down below the age where the franchise can be exercised at the polls.

MARKS CARDS 75

A few moments later, just to complicate and befuddle the situation, Don Edwards, San Jose, Cal., came bounding through the last nine with a 34 to get a 72 and a threeway tie with Moreland and Sawyer.

Their scores topped John G. Florio, former Ohio champion, by one stroke, the next pair in line being Frank English, Denver, and Roger Kelly, Los Angeles, with 74's. English, in particular, did it the hard way. He started with a 7.

After going out in 39, three over par, Wilson Marks, Jr., of Pittsburgh, came home in 36, only one over perfect figures, for a 75 and a place among the better scorers. Fred Brand, Jr., another Pittsburgher, had an indifferent 42-38—80.

needed hay. He has four fine guards and tackles, fair enough ends and two piperino centers.

The terminals will be guarded by Capt. Al Krankota, Jerry Chard, Socker Baker, Oren Peterson, Andy Factor, Ben Disegi and Johnny Chappela. Steven Sinko and Armand Niccolai, veteran tackles, will be hard to displace, and have a set of swell substitutes in Vic Vidoni and big Joe Weihl. Joe Kado, he of the tree trunk legs, and Henry Weinberg loom as the best set of guards.

Ben Ciccone has lost none of his crack defensive ability and steady passing at center. Should he lapse for an instant, Joe Malkovich is ready to take his place.

The schedule is tough and long, but the boys are much better off losing to major league elevens than running riot over less important ones, and there is no reason to fear that any team on the Red and Blue's program will have any picnic or pink tea with the Dukes.

If the knotty quarterback problem lends itself to solution, the Yellow Jackets, W. Va. Wesleyan, West Virginia, Bucknell, Western Maryland, University of Detroit, Westminster, Wash-Jeff, Pitt and Geneva will find campaigning against the Night Riders about as soft as a boarding house mattress.

DORMONT PLAYS BOOKS AGAIN

The third, and what may be the final game of the playoff series for the City League championship between the Books and Dormont nine, is scheduled for Olympic Park this evening, playing being slated to get under way at 6 o'clock.

The Books won the first game last Wednesday, and were held to a tie in the second. A win tonight for Boll's charges will complete the series.

The crack Immaculate Heart nine won the Pittsburgh N. B. F. elimination tournament yesterday, defeating the Scott Morgans, 9 to 3 at Greenlee Field, and will represent Pittsburgh in the national title series which are scheduled for this city this week.

STOGIES TAKE SERIES LEAD

ZANESVILLE, O., Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The battle for the championship of the Mid-Atlantic League moves into Zanesville today, with Wheeling holding a one-game margin over the Grays by reason of Bud Thomas' scintillating flinging.

Thomas limited the Grays, first-half winners, to three hits while his mates collected nine bingles and a quartet of runs to triumph, 4 to 0. The score:

BROVELLI STARS IN WORKOUT

NEWELL'S GROVE, Pa., Sept. 11.—Angel Brovelli, the all-America fullback from the Pacific Coast, stepped on the gas in the first hard scrimmage held by the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday afternoon, and in a most convincing manner showed what he is capable of doing.

Coach Jap Douds scrimmaged yesterday to get a final peek at some of the candidates, and while Brovelli is a fixture, he nevertheless took off the wraps and went places.

Rosslyn, Charleroi, P. P. C. Riders Win

Rosslyn Farms defeated McKeesport, 7 to 6, for the second time in two days.. Charleroi defeated Library, 7 to 5. Lieut. Trnavsky, of Charleroi, suffered a splintered jaw bone and the loss of a tooth in the final chukker.

BRUINS MENACE GIANTS

Associated Press.

The Chicago Cubs, hard to beat on their home grounds, looked more than ever like the sole remaining hope of the West to beat the New York Giants out of the National League pennant today as Pittsburgh virtually dropped out of the running.

The Cubs, still seven and one-half games behind the Giants, moved into second place yesterday by walloping the Phillies twice. With Bud Tinning and Lynn Nelson attaining something near "tops" for pitchers, the Cubs won, 4 to 0 and 4 to 2.

Tinning blanked the Phils with six hits in the opener and got some assistance from a home run by Stanley Hack. Nelson followed with a four-hit performance and another "rookie," Dolph Camilli, backed him up by walloping a home run for his first major league hit.

Despite the double victory, Chicago couldn't gain an inch on the Giants, who beat Cincinnati twice, 6 to 1 and 2 to 1, to make it three in a row over the Reds.

The fourth place St. Louis Cardinals kept pace with the leaders by beating the Boston Braves twice, 7 to 0 and 10 to 5.

The New York Yankees cut Washington's American League lead to 8½ games, but only by trimming Detroit twice, while the Senators were winning one game against Cleveland. The Yanks won, 2-1 and 9-1.

Washington put on two big innings at the expense of Oral Hildebrand and scored all its runs for a 7-to-3 triumph over the Indians.

The last place St. Louis Browns broke their losing streak by taking both ends of a bargain bill from Boston's Red Sox, 2-1 and 4-0, in 11 innings on the fine hurling of Bump Hadley and George Blaeholder. Philadelphia and Chicago had an open date.

Three Racers Die In Italian Grind

MONZA, Italy, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—M. Lehoux, of France, was hailed by automobile racing enthusiasts today after winning the annual running of the Grand Prix de Monza, in which three drivers were killed.

The dead were Guiseppe Compari and Mario Borzachini, both of Italy, and M. Czaichowski, of Poland. The Italians were killed when their cars skidded and crashed, and the Pole was burned to death when his machine caught fire.

Whitney Straight, of the United States, finished fourth.

MISS KUHN HAS 87, IS WOMEN'S GOLF LEADER

By TOM BIRKS

The Western Pennsylvania women's golf championship tournament qualifying round took on a strong Pittsburgh Field Club tinge at the Allegheny Country Club today as Miss Mary Huhn took the lead with an 87 and Mrs. C. I. Wendt and Miss Barbara Warmcastle, also of the Field Club, placed among the "first four" after one-third of the big field had posted scores.

Mrs. Wendt had an 89, and Miss Warmcastle and Mrs. Frank E. Campbell, of Stanton Heights, were tied at 93.

Francis Gould, 17-year-old star from Indiana, Pa., yesterday, won the club championship at Nemacolin by defeating George Bitzer, of Bentleyville, 8 and 7, in the 36-hole final. The lanky, long-hitting Gould, who recently enrolled as a member at Nemacolin that he might have the weaknesses of his game diagnosed and doctored by Jimmy Devlin, pro there and "professor" of golf at W. & J., had a medal of 76 in the morning, and finished out the afternoon round in par 72.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Well, Mussolini has kissed Gen. Balbo on both cheeks and decorated his whiskers, and, if he's still distributing honors to Italians, he should pin a rose on Gus Mancuso, the catcher for the Giants.

Nick Altrock

Because, folks, there isn't a guy more responsible for their lofty perch than Augustus, with the possible exception of Bill Terry. In a bankrupt year like this, receivers are so numerous it's easy to overlook a good one, which is why Mancuso's neon light tube has been basking under a bushel basket all year.

You can have your Hubbells and Schumachers and Fitzsimmonses on the hillock, but it takes a pip of a catcher to hold 'em in the winning groove. If Mancuso was playing football he'd be a national idol, because in the pigskin pastime it's the guy on the receiving end of the football that nabs the headlines. In fact, a forward pass is not a success until it's in the hands of a receiver.

So viva Augustus! Viva Mancuso! Viva Italia! And I'd better stick in three cheers and a tiger for Mussolini or he might get sore.

"Curfew Shall Not Ring Tonight."

That was the decision of Promoter John L. Hernon and Matchmaker Bus Vogel, of Hickey Park, shortly after noon today, with regard to the boxing show scheduled at Hickey Park, Millvale, tonight.

Not only is the show off for tonight, but forever and a day. In fact, there will not be any more professional boxing at Hickey Park until the birdies come again next spring, tra-la. This was to have been the final show of the current season and it had a premature closing.

The season was the shortest and poorest in Hickey Park's history. A whole month of dates were knocked out to make room for the Vince Dundee-Ted Yarosz show at Forbes Field and now the revival, even if only for a night, fades out of the picture.

Antol Kocsis, of Hungary, via New York, was to box Mose Butch, local southpaw featherweight, in the 10-round main bout.

Between Rounds

Following is the card of amateur bouts to be offered in the Moose Temple, New Kensington, tonight for the benefit of the Dan Burns Football Club: Woodrow White vs. Roy Douglas, Nick Rossi vs. Forrest Wilson, Tony Carion vs. Young Sharkey, Nick Galore vs. Ed Malone, Steve Mazur vs. Mike Erceg, Kid Baer vs. Willie Tharsher, George Scarf vs. Ben Misconis and Kike Gans vs. Roy Allen.

John Petro meets Billy Bain and Al Manceni boxes Wolf Mellinger in two of the bouts for the benefit of the Blind Fund of the Lions Club in McKeesport Thursday night.

Long's Sport Comment

THREE OF HIS PLAYERS TAKEN BY DEATH

Everything considered, Shotton's record as a manager has been a very creditable one. It might be added, too, that he has been handicaped by a series of fatalities on his club never paralleled in the experience of any other manager.

In Burt's six years with the Phils he has seen no fewer than three of his players taken by death. Pitcher Frank Ulrich died in February, 1929; Catcher Walter Lerian was killed by an automobile after the close of the same season, and Second Baseman Mickey Finn passed away during the present race.

AMATEUR GOLF FIGHT ANOTHER BIG GAMBLE

Tennis is supposed to run pretty close to form, whereas upsets are frequent in golf. So when a two-time net champion like Ellsworth Vines couldn't get past the fourth round in this year's United States title tournament, and not an American reached the final, leaving two foreigners, Fred Perry and Jack Crawford, to fight it out yesterday, with Perry taking the crown to England, what chance is there of picking a winner in such a big gamble as the national amateur golf championship fight, which opened today in Cincinnati?

Even Perry's victory over Crawford yesterday was rather surprising after the Anzac had won two of the first three sets, as Crawford had not been defeated in championship competition anywhere this year, and with the Australian, Wimbledon and French titles to his credit he was within a single set of scoring a grand slam in tennis for 1933. What Perry did to the American players in the Davis Cup inter-zone finals is evidence that his latest victory is no fluke, and it is all the more to his credit that he beat Crawford by a great uphill fight in coming from behind, but it shows again that 1933 is a year in which you can't take anything for granted.

Sandy Somerville is the amateur golf king, but who can say that he will repeat, particularly as 1933 has been a hoodoo to nearly all champions? Neither can Johnny Goodman, the open champion, be classed as a safe bet if he is among the 32 qualifiers. Always this tourney is anybody's fight, and more so this year than ever. You might select 10 names without including the winner.

GATES LOOMS AS GREAT HELP TO DUKES

If Elmer Layden, head football coach at Duquesne University, had any fears about the quarterback position, they are in a fair way toward being dispelled by the showing of Joe Gates in the practice drills for the season that is to be opened at Forbes Field Friday night, with Waynesburg College as the visiting attraction.

Gates is the latest sensation on the Bluff, if the conservative Layden ever can be said to have a sensation. At least Joe is the closest approach to what Elmer will concede is a sensation. The player may be the answer to a coach's prayer for a brainy field general who will not wilt under fire, and who will absorb plays quickly and execute them correctly.

SOPHOMORE PRESSES JUNIOR AND SENIOR

Gates comes to the Dukes from Windber (Pa.) High School. He played fine freshman football last season under Coach Buff Donnelli. The latter's yearlings had no regular schedule, but in the informal activities Gates displayed a lot of promise, and since the opening of fall practice he has fulfilled those frosh indications and continued the fine showing he made in the varsity workouts last spring.

Joe Gates

Joe Cutrona is a good quarterback, but that junior will have to step some if he hopes to keep his position and maintain his prestige as a signal-caller. And this will apply also to Frank DeCoster when the little Frenchman's infected hand has healed and he is back in uniform. The junior and senior quarterbacks will have to step aside for the hustling sophomore from Windber unless they deliver well and consistently this season. Gates looks like a young man who is going somewhere, and Duke fans are prepared to sit back and watch him rise. Layden has some good material this year, and Gates is part of it.

SPORT VIGNETTES

How'd you like to be a football coach and go to bed and dream you are playing Pitt, Navy, Purdue, Northwestern, Southern California and the Army, all in a row—and then wake up and find it's TRUE? . . . Well, that can happen almost any night now to Hunk Anderson, the Notre Dame coach, for that's the schedule his team plays after the first three games, with Kansas, Indiana and Carnegie Tech.

Hazelwood friends of Julius Solters were going to celebrate the rise of their favorite son to the major leagues until they learned it was the Red Sox the Baltimore Orioles sold him to. . . . Those Sox are getting better, though, with the new bankroll behind them and they may be going places next year, as they have started to already this season.

Andy (Shuey) Evancho, fullback and captain of the St. Vincent College Bearcats last fall, is assistant coach and a member of the faculty at Hurst High School. . . . His teammate at St. Vincent, Jack Melago, is head coach for All Saints High School at Masontown. . . . Creed Westfall, three sports star at St. Vincent, who married Miss Cecilia McKay, of Latrobe, a few weeks ago, is the new principal of the Troy (W. Va.) High School and also will serve as basketball coach and assistant football coach of the school.

More news about St. Vincent athletes: Andy Sugent, ace of the Bearcats' pitching corps last year, won 15 games, including a no-hitter, for Weston in the West Virginia State League this season, and Lefty Bioni, outfielder of the Bearcats, rapped out a homer and a single to help the New Castle team defeat our Pittsburgh Pirates in an exhibition game this summer, while Shorty Dashner, who played two seasons at shortstop for St. Vincent without committing an error, has gone East to have a tryout with the Baltimore Orioles.

The reason we have a national tennis tournament is so that a gent from Australia and another from England can meet for the title in the final round . . . Funny, isn't it, that this is the year we were supposed to be hot stuff for the Davis Cup matches, and wound up with nothing to talk about but the prospects of having our leading amateurs turn professional?

Add Cheerful Thoughts from Optimistic Souls: Dr. Mal Stevens' crack that we may expect 30 to 40 deaths from gridiron injuries this fall . . . That terrific detonation you hear is the deafening silence of the college authorities greeting his remarks.—HARRY KECK.

PITTSBURGH BUYER'S GUIDE AND BUSINESS REVIEW

FEDERAL BONDS BUCK LOWER TENDENCY

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—The bond market drifted lazily to lower levels during the past week with trading interest at its lowest ebb since the slow and uncertain days of last spring.

Strength of United States government securities was the one bright spot on the loans picture. Although the activity in this group was generally at a minimum, most of the liberties and treasuries recorded small daily gains, with some issues getting up to within reaching distance of their year's peaks. Several new highs were made by the recently listed treasury 3¼s.

DOUBTS REMOVED

Uncertainties regarding the Treasury's September 15 financing were removed in the latter part of the week with the announcement that the new requirements would be filled through the issuance of some $220,000,000 of nine-months certificates at the record low interest rate of ¼ of 1 per cent.

At the same time the Federal Reserve System stepped up its open market purchases of government obligations. The Treasury indicated that substantial new security offerings might not be expected before December.

RAILS HEAVY

Railway liens generally were the heaviest of the corporate groups despite the satisfactory improvement in freight car loadings. Pressure on this section, however, was confined principally to secondary maturities which were disposed to follow stocks rather closely. There was also some liquidation of the utilities on the possibility that further rate reductions might greatly reduce earnings. The industrials held fairly well although they, too, had their casualties.

Foreign obligations were dull and highly irregular throughout, with little progress being made by most of the leading European government loans.

COAL SHIPPING HITS NEW HIGH

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Bituminous coal shipments to lower parts in Ohio reached a new high level for the season in the week ending September 4, when lake fleets loaded 1,366,667 tons. The previous record for a week this season was 1,280,792 tons in the last week of July.

The heavy shipments of the week of September 4 brought the total movement of the season to 19,205,670 tons, and put shipments ahead of the 1931 movement for the first time this year.

The week of September 4 shipments by ports and railroads:

STEEL FACING FALL TEST

CLEVELAND, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—A growing enthusiasm for the steel code under the National Recovery Act was noted today by the magazine Steel in its weekly review of conditions in the industry. The review said:

"Some portions of the industry remain confident of good fall business; others can find nothing assuring in an analysis of the four leading outlets.

"But there is growing enthusiasm for the steel code and its possibilities for rationalizing competition, and an increasingly favorable reaction to NRA on the ground that if it does not work the alternative may be worse . . .

"Extension of the current iron and steel prices, except for a few advances through the fourth quarter and the filing and dissemination of new extras and differentials in conformity with the steel code have removed most of the artificial barriers which have been restraining trade.

"In a broad sense, the steel market this week again becomes a free one, and while withdrawal from stocks will prevent specifications being exactly synonymous with consumptive requirements, the trend of demand will be significant and provide the first gauge of the fall market . . .

"Steel output dropped 4 points last week to 42 per cent . . . Steel's composites are unchanged, a $31.23 for iron and steel, $48.30 for finished steel and $11 for scrap."

Deposit Guarantee Board to Confer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The newly-appointed board of the Deposit Guarantee Corporation will meet here today for the first time, with the problem of examination of some 8,000 non-member bank for inclusion in the bank insurance pool up for consideration.

One of the first steps requiring the board's attention will be appointment of state directors to supervise examination work in each of the 48 states and District of Columbia.

Holders Seek Federal Action on Foreign Bond Defaults

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

HOLDERS OF DEFAULTED foreign bonds are beginning to demand government action for their protection. Out of about $5,500,000,000 of foreign dollar bonds held in this country nearly $2,000,000,000 are in default.

The Securities Act provides for the formation of a Corporation of Foreign Security Holders authorized to accept deposits of foreign bonds and to carry on negotiations for the resumption of payments or the conversion of securities into new bonds on which payments can be made.

Up to the present time nothing has been done to bring this corporation into existence. This threatens to leave the protection of foreign bond holders to private agencies. In addition, the fact that the corporation has been authorized and may be brought into operation has delayed action by protective committees and private effort.

* * *

President Must Make Proclamation

UNDER THE SECURITIES Act, Title II, which provides for the corporation, shall not take effect until the President finds that it is in the public interest and declares this in a proclamation.

The Federal Trade Commission then must appoint six directors and must designate a chairman and a vice chairman. An appropriation of $75,000 has been made for the corporation and, in addition, it may levy charges on the holders of deposited securities on a pro rata basis.

While the corporation, in its work, may not claim to be acting for the state department or the United States Government, it would have broad powers to carry on negotiations for the relief of holders of defaulted bonds and would have more prestige than a privately organized protective committee.

Petition for Action Given to Commission

LAST WEEK the Latin-American Bondholders' Association forwarded a petition, signed by more than 1,000, to the Federal Trade Commission. The petition asked that action on the formation of the Corporation of Foreign Security Holders be taken through the President.

The need for government assistance has been emphasized by Robert S. Byfield, an authority on foreign securities, in a pamphlet discussion of the foreign bond situation prepared for Distributors Group, Inc. He declared:

"Due principally to the multitude of changes that have taken place in the staffs of investment banking houses and in the manner of conducting the business, holders of foreign bonds have found it difficult to obtain experienced advice and counsel as to their holdings. Presentation of the statistical picture with respect to a foreign bond, regardless of its completeness, may in many instances afford no clue as to whether the bonds should be held or sold.

"It rather necessitates an intimate familiarity with the borrowing country and the affairs of the particular borrower within that country, coupled with an estimate of many complex factors. Furthermore, with rapidly changing conditions throughout the world an opinion rendered on a given date might prove to have been valid for only a short time after which—due to the occurrence of a new series of events—it might have to be completely revised. To be effective, investment counsel in the field of foreign securities must not only be continuously applied, but must be capable of being translated into action at a moment's notice."

INTERNATIONAL SHOWS AUTO BUGGY

Two of the early motor vehicles which have taken a prominent place among the exhibits at A Century of Progress Exposition at Chicago are the high-wheeled auto wagon and a two-cylinder auto buggy, built by International Harvester. The vehicles play parts in the transportation pageant, Wings of a Century.

As early as 1897 the advantages of gasoline power in operating vehicles were foreseen by Harvester company engineers and plans were, accordingly, drawn for a high-wheeled, gasoline-propelled motor vehicle. The first model based on these plans was built in 1899 and operated on the streets of Chicago for two years. An improved model was built in 1903, and in 1905 further improvements were made and a quantity production schedule authorized for both auto buggies and auto wagons. Both the International auto wagon and the International auto buggy that take part in the pageant were among the first made on that schedule, one being built in 1906 and the other in 1907.

ROADS BAD

Roads in 1907 were prevailingly bad, and this condition greatly influenced Harvester engineers at the start in concentrating their efforts on the design of a conveyance with high wheels, which were advantageous in negotiating muddy roads. The auto buggy of 1907 is operated by a two-cylinder, air-cooled engine, suspended on a steel sub-frame under the body. Power is transmitted through a chain drive from the engine to a countershaft and from this shaft also by chain drive to sprocket wheels on each rear wheel. Jump spark ignition is energized by dry cells. The body and top of the auto buggy are similar to the conventional two and three-seated wagon or surrey so common in the first years of this century. The wheels are equipped with solid-rubber tires. This first International vehicle has a nominal capacity of one thousand pounds. It operates at two forward speeds and one reverse.

LINE INCREASED

Since those early days of International motor truck development the line has grown until models of numerous types and sizes ranging from ½-ton to 7½-ton capacity are now available to meet every hauling need.

In the International Harvester exhibit in the Agricultural Building in the Harvester Company's two historic exhibits in the dome of the Travel and Transport Building will be seen representative International truck models of all sizes.

Increase in Farm Income Forecast

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics expects total United States farm income to be approximately $6,360,000,000 this year, compared to $5,143,000,000 in 1932, assuming a continued improved demand for farm products for the remainder of this year.

Most of the increase in income is attributed to better crop prices since prices of most live stock have averaged slightly lower this year than last.

CANADA LEADS EXPORTERS OF WHEAT

MONTREAL, Quebec, Sept. 11.—The rise of Canada to the leading position as the largest exporter of wheat is outlined in a bulletin issued by the agricultural department of the Canadian National Railways. For the crop years, 1909-1914, Russia was the principal exporter of wheat with an average percentage of 24.5, representing 164,000,000 bushels.

The United States accounted for 16.4 per cent; Danubian countries, 16.2 per cent; Canada, 14.2 per cent; Argentina, 12.6 per cent; Australia, 8.2 per cent, and India, 7.5 per cent out of total exports of 671,000,000 bushels.

FIRST PLACE

For the prosperity period following the war 1924-1929, the relative positions underwent a change. Canada jumped to first place with a percentage share of 38.8 and a total net export of 309,000,000 bushels. The United States exported 22.4 per cent; Argentine 19.4 per cent; Australia 12.1 per cent; Danubian countries 4.6 per cent; Russia 1.6 per cent; India 1.1 per cent. The total export for all countries was 797,000,000 bushels.

During the crop year 1932-1933 a further change occurred. Canada's share of the exports had risen to 42.2 per cent although the amount of the Canadian export fell off to 260,000,000 bushels. Australia was second with 25.5 per cent; Argentine, 20.3 per cent; United States, 4.9 per cent, and Russia, 2.7 per cent. The total export for all countries was 616,000,000 bushels.

CROP DECLINES

Canada expects to maintain its leading position this year. Although the current crop will not exceed 260,000,000 bushels, a decrease of almost 200,000,000 bushels as compared with last year, there is a large surplus of wheat in the country and the amount available for export will approximate that of last year. The United States crop is short and Russia is not expected to figure as a factor at all. It is generally believed that the supply of wheat is now leveling off with the demand and that a natural stabilization of price will result.

FOREIGN TRADE BODY FORMED

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Extension of America's foreign trade is the aim of a National Federation of Foreign Trade Associations, formation of which is announced by Reginald F. Chutter, of the Philadelphia Chamber of Commerce, temporary chairman of the new group.

Development of a national "foreign trade consciousness" and policies through an organized "interchange of ideas" will be included in the scope of the new organization's work, said Chutter.

He added expansion of foreign trade will be sought through coordination of efforts and activities of the various regional and technical foreign trade associations throughout the country.

Whitney Opposes Untermyer Tax Plan

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(INS.)—The securities business will be driven from New York within one month if the Untermyer tax program is adopted, Richard Whitney, president of the New York Stock Exchange, told Mayor O'Brien today at the public hearing on the proposed new taxes before the Board of Estimate.

Coal Output Hits New High for Year

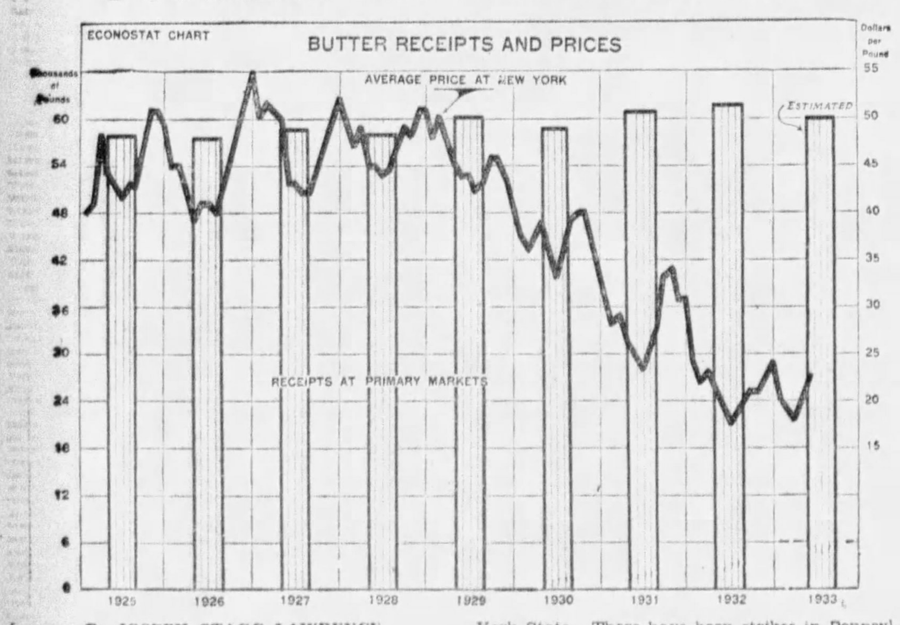
WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Output of both bituminous coal and anthracite increased during the week ended September 2, the former striking a new high mark for the year at 7,970,000 tons.

The bituminous increase for the week was 2.8 per cent, 7,754,000 tons having been mined the previous week.

Anthracite output for the week totaled 1,234,000 tons, compared to 1,032,000 tons the previous week.

Pennsylvania produced 2,165,000 tons of soft coal during the week ended August 26, or 5,000 tons more than the previous week.

Butter Ranks First as Income Producer for American Farmer



By JOSEPH STAGG LAWRENCE
Editor, The Econostat

Another important farm crop whose value has not been adequately appreciated is butter. Its importance may best be indicated by stating that the value of butter marketed in 1929 was $798,442,240, whereas wheat in the same year had a value of $696,200,000.

The Agricultural Adjustment Act mentions six specific farm commodities to be benefitted and one general or composite commodity; the latter is referred to as "dairy products."

Dairy products may be divided into three general groups—butter, cheese and milk. Milk is not very well suited to beneficial manipulation by the government, as it is now discovering. Suggestions have been made for the destruction of all tubercular cows and the purchase of poor producers by the government.

In the case of butter it is a little easier for Uncle Sam to step in and offer help. Furthermore, this will tend to relieve a very soft spot in the farm situation, particularly in the East.

Farmers have protested against the methods used by distributors in paying for milk and their products have found violent expression in New York State. There have been strikes in Pennsylvania, threatened strikes in New Jersey and disturbances of various proportions in other parts of the country.

The nub of the grievance has been that the farmer has been paid one price for milk distributed in its raw form to the ultimate consumer and another much lower price for milk which reaches him in the form of cheese and butter. The price of milk distributed in its original state to the consumer is in itself unsatisfactory to the farmer.

Obviously the lower price received for that milk which is converted into butter and cheese is still less acceptable. The importance of this great product is indicated by the fact that it ranks first among all farm products as a source of gross income, averaging for the period 1924-1928 $1,829,175,000 and accounting for 15.6 per cent of the total farm income.

The job of Uncle Sam is quite clear. The farmers want him to step in and raise the price of all milk above its present level and assure a uniform price, no matter what form the original product may finally take. Whether the government can comply with this ideal requirement is another question.

STOCK MARKET TRADING DULL, TONE FIRM

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Sleepy-time financial markets ambled along at a snail's pace today with only occasional moments of wakefulness to break the soporific monotony.

The undertone of stocks was firm, however, notwithstanding the trading activity was not much greater than that of Saturday's deadly dull session. Some of the alcohols and other specialties improved substantially on small buying and the list, as a whole, was moderately higher. Grains and cotton showed signs of recovery, with wheat getting up a cent or more a bushel. Silver, rubber and sugar futures were a bit higher. European gold currencies and sterling rallied against the dollar, although the price of bar gold at London was somewhat lower. Bonds were moderately irregular.

The alcohol shares reflected the revival of repeal sentiment with National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol, United States Industrial Alcohol and Schenley getting up 2 to around 4 or more points. Union Pacific came back 3, while Santa Fe, New York Central and Pennsylvania advanced about a point each. Others, up 1 to 2 or more, included Johns-Manville, Montgomery Ward, United States Smelting, Sears Roebuck, American Telephone, United States Steel, Chrysler, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Loew's, American Tobacco B, Public Service of New Jersey, United Aircraft, Western Union, Westinghouse and Cerro de Pasco.

While market observers were still waiting for "something to happen" that might rejuvenate the list, the fact that the short interest has dwindled to around 900,000 shares, compared with more than 1,400,000 on June 30, last, was a little disquieting to some. On the other hand, however, proponents of the advance point out that sentiment, while not overly enthusiastic, is preponderantly bullish and that bearish operations for some time have been at a minimum.

The consensus in brokerage circles seems to be that this week should witness the consumption of the organization of the National Recovery program with the odds now in favor of success. At the same time, various difficulties are envisaged. The inflationists entertain the belief that if the administration's plans do not meet with the hoped-for results, recourse will be had to currency expansion in addition to further broadening of the credit field.

Holders of liquor stocks were highly cheerful because of the voting in four states this week on prohibition repeal. Ballots were being cast in Maine today on the amendment proposition, and Maryland, Minnesota and Colorado will settle the question tomorrow. If these four states approve the repeal measure, they will make a total of 29 that have stepped over into the moist area.

COTTON PRICES IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Cotton futures opened barely steady, 1 lower to 3 higher, with steadier Liverpool cables offset by southern hedge selling and liquidation. October, 8.68; December, 8.88; January, 8.95; March, 9:12; May, 9.31; July, 9.45.

A fairly active demand and some buying for Liverpool account steadied prices and the market after the first half hour showed net advances of 3 to 6 points, December having rallied from 8.88 to 8.94.

The market held very steady later in the morning. By midday December had sold up to 9.07 and May to 9.49, making net advances of 18 to 20 points. The New York Cotton Exchange service has raised its estimate of last season's consumption from 14,132,000 to 14,405,000 bales and reduced its figures on the estimated carryover at the end of last July from 11,975,000 to 11,736,000 bales.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 11.—Cotton, no receipts. Spot in fair demand; prices four points lower; quotations in pence: American strict good middling, 6.03; good middling, 5.73; strict middling, 5.43; middling, 5.28; strict low middling, 5.13; low middling, 4.93; strict good ordinary, 4.73; good ordinary, 4.43. Futures closed quiet and steady. October, 5.14; December, 5.16; January, 5.19; March, 5.23; May, 5.27; July, 5.31.

VARYING VIEWS REFLECTED IN MARKET

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University.

NEW YORK Sept. 11.—The stock market sagged last week and closed with losses of from 2 to 4 points from the end of the preceding week. The gold mining and oil shares were relatively strong, though their gains were somewhat disappointing.

Ordinarily an intelligent observer would say that some further sagging tendency would be probable, and that at most dullness would continue, pending further light on the results of our economic experiments. But under existing conditions all must be in doubt, for we may awake any morning to find a new play adopted by our "quarterback."

It may be wise to maintained a moderate long position in the very best equities, as a continued hedge against possible dollar depreciation, but speculative profits are too uncertain to warrant a trading position at this time.

PUBLIC OUT

The market is highly professional, there being very little public following.

It is not only dull, with a small volume of trading, but also it is narrow, there being relatively few issues appearing on the tape.

Furthermore, it is a "thin" market, as indicated by the moves caused in any issues in which much buying or selling appears. The bid and asked quotations are generally far apart, and the asked quotations much above actual selling prices.

POOLS INACTIVE

On several days, the most active issues have advanced slightly, but a majority of the stocks traded in have declined pretty steadily all week. And the bond price averages have gradually worked lower.

Evidently there is a little activity by a few "pools" and some speculative buying for the inflation which many consider inevitable; but real investment buying is practically nil, and a good deal of dribbling liquidation has gone on.

Above all, one senses doubt and uncertainty.

VOLUME DECLINES

On the bull side it can be said that no considerable liquidation or selling pressure has been apparent, and in general the volume of trading has been declining as the market has sagged. The rate of decline in the averages has been more gradual on three of the last four days.

Signs of support, of reduced pressure, have been evident at the lows of last Wednesday and Friday.

What activity there has been on several days occurred in the stocks which were marked up.

BEAR ARGUMENTS

On the bear side, it is argued that inflation has been discounted, and that at present all depends upon our experiment in government control of business which many think to be highly doubtful.

At present business activity is still receding from the artificially stimulated peak reached in July, there being unseasonable declines in the orders for several products, including steel.

Technically, we find a small short interest in the market; there is very little investment buying. On four of the last five trading days the general trend of the volume has been opposite to that of prices.

Probably a market test is not distant. I would guess that if there is no break by Thursday, a trading rally may be expected; meanwhile, the trader should protect his position at the lows of last Friday, and in some cases stop-loss orders may be justified for the purpose.

Liverpool Wheat Market.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 11. — The market was due ⅝ to ¾ cent lower, opened ¼ to ½ cent off, and at 1:20 p. m. was down ¾ cent. At 2:15 p. m. the market was ⅝ pence lower, based on sterling at 4.52½.

SLUG BALL PARK WATCHMAN

Police are searching today for two youths who were reported to having taken $1,000 from the O'Briskey Commissary at Forbes Field after slugging the watchman, Max Seidleson, on the head with an iron pipe.

From the watchman, police were told, the keys to the commissary were obtained. They took the money from the safe in the office by breaking the combination, according to police.

Sixteen-year-old Julia Werley, of 614 Denniston avenue, reported to police that two men picked her up in Forbes street Saturday night, and later threw her out of their automobile in Beechwood boulevard, near Aylesboro avenue.

Joseph Marks, of 1408 Center avenue, and Birdie Kohle turned over $10 to bandits who held them up in Schenley Park Saturday night, they told police.

SUBWAY CROWD NABS SUSPECT

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—(AP.)—Enraged citizens yesterday captured a burly Negro in flight after an attack on a woman in a West Side subway station, and police said they believed the prisoner to be the man sought for a long series of depredations and assaults in Central Park.

The man was rescued from late home-goers in the subway by two officers with drawn pistols, when a good-sized mob gathered, shouting:

"Lynch him! Shoot him!"

Penthouse

By ARTHUR SOMERS ROCHE

but he can't be certain of that.

"Something struck his foot; he looked down and saw a revolver on the bricks of the porch. Not knowing what he was doing, he bent over and picked up the gun, just as Mimi toppled on her face. Why he didn't grab her before she fell, he doesn't know. He says he was dazed, bewildered. It's a hell of an alibi, isn't it?"

Bought Revolver

"It's not too hot," said Durant thoughtfully. "It's the sort of story a man would think up to explain not having caught the girl in his arms. It's also the kind of story a man would tell to explain having the revolver in his hand. And it doesn't seem to me at all unreasonable that a man should let a girl fall without catching her. It was so sudden, so completely unexpected, that he wouldn't realize what had happened?"

"You talk as though you believe the story," jeered Stevens.

Durant's deep-set eyes gleamed. "It's an odd kind of story, too," he said. "The kind of a tale a man would tell who was telling the truth."

Stevens grinned derisively. "It's a good thing for you that this isn't one of your cases," he said. "The man who snaked Tony Gazotti practically off the hot seat would have a busted reputation if he tackled this one."

"Maybe," admitted Durant, "but unless it can be proved that the gun belongs to Siddall—"

"Don't be silly," interrupted Stevens. "The pawnbroker on Sixth Avenue who sold the gun to Siddall yesterday afternoon came in to Headquarters shortly after noon today; he produced his records and identified Siddall as the man who had bought it."

Had a Permit

"And that one seems to clinch it," said Durant."

"I told you what the odds were. What's your interest anyway?"

"I know the boy and I like him. No possibility of the pawnbroker's making a mistake, is there? Don't you have to sign when you buy a gun or something like that? Did he have Siddall's signature?"

"Certainly not. He came in scared to death. He'd read in the papers about the killing and dashed right down to square himself. Siddall had told him his name and address when he bought the gun, and showed him his permit to carry one. Oh, he had one, all right. He got it seven or eight months ago when his apartment was burglarized. He swore he'd never been in the pawnshop; that he was walking uptown from his office on Pine street yesterday afternoon, just about the time Levitoff, the pawnbroker, maintained he sold him the gun.

"But Siddall hasn't got a single witness to prove where he was between the hours of three and four, during which time Levitoff sold him the gun. Oh, it's too simple. Tough luck that he's a friend of yours, but I'm not so keen for the squaw-killers. I hope he gets a nice short trial and a pleasant walk to the chair. Anything else I can do for you?"

"And the name of that show that I'm not going to put my dough into is 'Tough Baby,' and Joralemon is the producer. It's a musical. Just in case."

"I'll not forget, although why a couple of friends shouldn't discuss a sensational murder is by me. However, we hardly mentioned it. Much obliged. I'll do as much for you sometime."

"Oh, yeah?" Stevens grinned almost affectionately. "I suppose you didn't do anything when you tipped the commissioner that I was framed when the Bronx boys tried to make it seem I was handling hot money. You don't owe me anything. Have a ginger ale with me?"

A Difficult Case

Durant smiled at the insinuation. Morosini opened the speakeasy door for him and shook him by the hand.

"Always glad to see you, Mr. Durant," he said. He grinned widely, showing black stumps where teeth had been until a five-ounce glove hit him. "No dictaphone today," he laughed.

Durant stepped out into the hot afternoon sun. Last night's thunderstorm, of which he had been unaware, had not given more than momentary relief to a city sweltering in a midsummer heat wave. He visualized, as he strolled toward Connolly's restaurant, the cell in the Tombs in which Tom Siddall must be sweltering. Heat and nerves must combine to threaten the young man's sanity.

At that, it looked as if a breakdown of his sanity was the only escape for the young broker. If the police case was as strong as Lieutenant Stevens maintained it was, only the good old defense of insanity would avail. Only, and the gleam in Durant's eyes became brighter, Tommy Siddall was no killer. At least, he wasn't a woman-killer. Not even intoxicated could he murder a girl. Yet he had, according to all the evidence! In spite of the evidence Siddall's innocence must be established. But no way in which this might be done presented itself to Durant as he entered Connolly's restaurant.

"Tony's waiting for you upstairs, Mr. Durant," he said. He led the way through a door to a flight of stairs. "The room at the top," he said, pointing.

Durant Welcomed

Durant smiled as he always did when tiny Tony Gazotti was termed "the big fellow." He was still smiling as he opened the door and saw the man popularly know as Public Enemy Number One seated at a table. He was bending over a jigsaw puzzle and Durant wondered what the world would say if it knew of Gazotti's latest preoccupation.

"Hello, Mr. Durant." The gangster's voice was reedy, almost feminine with its high treble. But there was nothing feminine in the opaque black eyes that stared at his visitor. "I wish to God I'd never let myself go nuts over this thing," said Gazotti. "I ducked the cross-word puzzle craze because that took education. But this damn thing has me running around in circles." In sudden rage he swept the pieces off the table with an overmanicured hand. "What on your mind?"

"How do things stand between you and Jim Crelliman? Buddies?"

"Now that's a silly question! You know what I think of that so-and-so."

"I know what you thought of him yesterday, but you big shots get married and divorced so easily, you fall in and out of love so quickly—how could I tell but what you and Crelliman had buried the hatchet?"

"If I ever bury it, it will be in his skull," said Gazotti.

THE AGE OF STONE

History is the record of human experience. With archeology, Biblical record and tradition mixed with fable, it relates the progress of mankind from the Stone Age to the present day. In the Stone Age men lived in caves, wore hides, had implements and weapons of stone to fight wild animals and provide food.

They had a primitive social order with a chieftain in authority. Unearthed human remains, implements and carvings place the Stone Age 50,000 to 17,000 years ago. (World History.)

OLD VIEWS ABOUT UNIVERSE

Left: Pythagoras (580? to 500 B. C.) explained the universe as a harmonious whole (kosmos), the motionless earth being the center around which the other bodies revolved.

Above: Copernicus (1473 to 1543 A. D.), called the founder of modern astronomy, thought the sun was the center of the universe, with the earth and celestial bodies circling around the same. (Cleveland: Modern Scientific Knowledge.) (Astronomy.)

PENN STATE AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL

Man depends upon nature for food; hence only through knowledge of her laws can he produce the best and the most. Agriculture is the science of cultivating ground, raising crops and live stock. It is thoroughly taught in colleges. The Pennsylvania State College at State College, Pa., offers 4-year courses in agricultural chemistry, economy, engineering, forestry, botany, horticulture, zoology.

U. S. LAND AREA

Our 1,903,000,000 acres of land not counting Alaska and insular possessions, equalling about 1/17 of the earth's total land area, blessed with rich vegetation, minerals, powerful streams, constitute a great inheritance offering often grave problems, needing wise administration. The 51.9% cultivated land already yields a heavy overproduction for the present 125 million population. The still unused 48.1% represents (1929) an enormous reservoir for future expansion. (Probl. of Democracy.)

FIRE

PUEBLO CLIFF DWELLERS

Indians, the original inhabitants of America, had to be reckoned with at every advance of frontier civilization. Pueblo Cliff-Dwellers are Indians of the valleys of the Rio Grande and Rio Colorado, whose homes were built several hundred feet up on the cliff sides. They subsisted by hunting and fishing. (United States Hist.)

MUMMY

Left: Among the antique nations, Egyptians knew most of chemistry. They embalmed bodies, prepared medicine, paint, soap, beer, vinegar, metals, alloys, salt, vitriol, soda, glass, enamel and tile.

Greeks and Romans took the chemical knowledge of the Egyptians but added little. Above, head of Seti I, preserved about 3,225 years. (Mummy in Cairo Museum.) (Breasted: History of Egypt.)

Junior Patrol Mail Box

From now on for a while, fellows, the Mail Box won't be so big, and so it won't be able to hold all the letters in full you send in to headquarters.

But it will be big enough, we expect, to hold the interesting important news every day, and so we want you to keep right on writing letters, telling us what you are doing to help others and any other news you may have for us.

Don't forget that we always want drawings and the names of members who would like to play in the Junior Patrol program which goes on the air every Wednesday.

And please notice too, fellows, that the Mail Box is in the Sun-Telegraph on Sundays too now! Look for it, and write and tell us what you think of it. And tell your friends that the Mail Box is appearing on Sundays. If you want your letter printed Sundays, tell us about it.

Jack Rosenfeld, of 761 Merchant street, Ambridge, is a new captain of the NRA Patrol, of Ambridge, Pa. He writes that his members are going to contribute a cent a week, so that they can have a party at the end of the month. Glad to hear it, Jack. Tell us about your meetings.

Ruth Gondos, of 468 Highland avenue, Monongahela, Pa., is another new captain. She has 12 members. Good luck, Ruth. Please let us know what you do to help others.

Capt. Louis E. Motte, of R. F. D. No. 4, McDonald, Pa., has 16 members in his patrol now. At the end of October they are going to have a big fall party.

Capt. Margaret Schloss, of 5 Graib street, sends in two new members. You must have 10 members in your club before we can send you an armband, Margaret, but two new members now are dandy and we are sure you will soon have 10.

In our own burg we had the widely known "On the Ball." He went along Market street with a watch in his hand. When a hoss car came along he rushed to the middle of the tracks, looked at his watch and bellowed, "On the Ball."

When trolleys came in they were clocked by the vigilant "On the Ball." He was known all over the city, never begged, never harmed anybody and was always operating day and night.

If the wreck of the Hesperus had sailed up the creek 80 years behind schedule, "On the Ball" would have been on the wharf yelling, "On the Ball." He had the happy faculty of imagining everything and everybody was on time. It was the legend around our town that "On the Ball" was a train dispatcher who had gone nuts waiting for them.

A three-alarm fire brought about his downfall. When the first steamer arrived after an eight-mile drag through a blizzard, a weird figure jumped out of a snowbank in a cemetery and screeched, "On the Ball." He joined the unclaimed bundles on the top shelf and spent his last years clocking wheelbarrows at the state farm.

Then there was Sunburned Joe, selling newspapers browner than sealskin at Ninth and Oxford. Sunburned Joe's papers were 20 years old in 1895. If you bought one it crumbled to fine dust in your hand. Joe sat there looking into the sun all day, year after year, announcing that the Atlantic cable was completed and that Grant had taken Richmond.

Among the better dressers was the corn doctor in a high hat and frock coat covered with hundreds of white pearl buttons. He joined all the Easter parades, walked up and down Market street and spoke to nobody. The corn doctor tipped his hat to every woman he passed on the street. He carried no sign boards or any other kind of advertising. He had no place of business. He was just the corn doctor.

They were only three out of at least 20 characters in our town. They were not mendicants. Nobody ever bought a paper off Sunburned Joe and the others had nothing to sell. Outside of Mississippi, all the queer humans on Broadway have an object in their madness. A quick touch here, a free meal there or the privilege of crashing the gates with the first-nighters.

The styles in town characters have changed with the years. They run for office now. And get elected.

Councilmanic Candidates

Thumbnail Sketches of Some of the Aspirants, For the Guidance of the Voters

No matter who is elected Mayor of Pittsburgh, his capacity for good or evil will be determined largely by the caliber of the City Council.

Much of the scandal that marked the last administration would have been avoided if Council had not been subservient to the Mayor.

The spoils system, racketeering and many of the other evils from which Pittsburgh suffers could not flourish, even with a bad Mayor, if Council made full use of its power to prevent these things.

The legislative and executive branches of the municipal government are of equal importance, and it behooves the citizens to exercise just as much care in the election of Councilmen as in the election of the Mayor.

The Councilmanic election this year is especially important, because five members, constituting a majority, are to be chosen.

The number of candidates in the field for these five places is bewildering in its multiplicity. It is out of the question for most of the citizens to familiarize themselves with the records and affiliations of the scores of aspirants for seats in the Council.

Some of the factions have undertaken to guide voters by putting out slates of Councilmanic candidates. The Coyne-Herron machine has a slate, the organization supporting Joseph N. Mackrell for Mayor has a slate, and that wing of the Democratic party which is for William N. McNair for Mayor has a slate. The Citizens' League, which is backing the candidacy of P. J. McArdle for Mayor, also has a slate, but in its slate is at least one candidate, ex-Mayor William A. Magee, who has explicitly refused to tie himself up with any particular group or party, but is running as an independent.

The Sun-Telegraph approves of Magee's position in this matter and recommends that the voters pursue an equally independent course and choose Councilmen singly for their individual merits and not because of their connection with a faction.

There are no sharply defined lines of cleavage between the factions so far as policies of municipal government are concerned.

And there seems greater probability that Council will pursue an independent course and break away from the system of being a mere rubber stamp for the Mayor if factionalism is ignored in the choosing of the members.

That voters may have at least some slight guidance in efforts to appraise the merits of the leading Councilmanic candidates the Sun-Telegraph is presenting today thumbnail sketches of some of them. They are given in alphabetical order.

Clifford B. Connelley, seeking a Republican nomination, has served in Council since 1929. He was a member of the group that stood with Mayor Charles H. Kline through thick and thin. Connelley is an educator by profession and was Commissioner of Labor under Gov. Sproul.

Walter R. Demmler, a Democratic candidate, is a member of an old Pittsburgh family that for many years has been prominent in the business life of the city. He lives on the North Side and is a brother of Fred Demmler, the brilliant young Pittsburgh artist who was killed in the World War. He is active in church work and has long been a serious student of governmental problems, but has never held public office and never before has been a candidate.

Frank L. Duggan, Republican, elected by Council in April to fill a vacancy in that body, is general manager of the Consolidated Ice Company. He has rendered the city good service as chairman of the Better Traffic Committee and in other ways. Duggan is well thought of by persons whose judgment commands respect.

W. Y. English, Republican, has been in the present Council continuously since 1913. An index to his character may be found in the following incident: When Council was under fire for refusing to investigate the charges against Mayor Kline, English, a staunch supporter of the Mayor, quoted Scripture in denouncing the administration's critics and prayed: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

Thomas J. Gallagher, Democratic candidate, was elected to the Legislature as a Republican, but quit the party in disgust over the manner in which the bosses blocked social legislation in the last session. He was the author of the sweatshop resolution.

Edward M. Hough, Republican, is a member of the Legislature, and his record at the last session was good. He was one of the Allegheny County members who supported the resolution for clean election laws which the Coyne majority voted down in caucus.

John M. Huston, a Democratic candidate, is a successful businessman associated with one of the city's largest food concerns. Until the present campaign he was interested in Republican political affairs. He has never been a candidate before.

John J. Kane, a Democrat, is business agent for the pressmen's union and a member of the Legislature. He was one of the strongest, if not the strongest, of the Democratic members in the House. He favored social legislation, clean elections, and a referendum on the city manager plan.

Harry A. Little, Republican, succeeded Mayor Herron as president of Council. He lives on the North Side and has served continuously either in the Legislature or Council since 1923. He was an unquestioning follower of Mayor Kline and bears an indelible Coyne label.

William A. Magee, independent, served two terms as Mayor of Pittsburgh and also served as a member of the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission. He is a recognized authority on municipal affairs and is well qualified in every way to give the city valuable service.

James F. Malone, like Magee, is a candidate in the Republican, Democratic and Independent primaries. Malone has had much experience in municipal affairs as director of supplies, member and president of Council, and a member of the City Planning Commission. As director of supplies during the World War, when supplies were hard to get, he showed unusual business ability.

Hugh F. McKnight, Republican, is president of a well known hardware company on the North Side, where he lives. He is a member of the Sinking Fund Commission and was a delegate to the Republican National Convention last year.

Howard B. McNutt, a Republican, is a retired businessman. He was burgess of Knoxville from 1922 to 1927. He is strongly independent.

George S. Oliver, Republican, is an organization politician. He is a son of the late Senator George T. Oliver and formerly was a newspaper publisher. When Senator James J. Coyne was running for County Commissioner two years ago Oliver, returning from his summer residence at Cobourg, Ont., publicly announced that he was "going to take off his coat and help his old friend Jimmy Coyne."

John W. Patterson, running in both the Republican and

Nervous Temperaments

To divorce a screen star because of his temperament or of his "fits of rage" seems to me about as reasonable as to give away a pet dog because it barks, or to part with a pet kitten because it purrs.

* * *

What do you expect when you marry ANYBODY whose work demands that he be keyed up to a high tension three-quarters of the time? Tranquility? Equanimity? A nice, soothing sedative?

* * *

In that old play "The Circle" the hero remarked to the heroine, "I don't offer you happiness; I offer you LOVE."- Love isn't all sweetness and light and dreaming under the moon. Any love that can't weather a few storms and gusts of temper—or temperament—is a weak foundation for marriage.

When you marry one of these glamorous screen stars you do not marry him or her for serenity, repose and relaxation. You marry him for adventure, for excitement, for a colorful romance. For THRILLS—not for the rest-cure.

* * *

It is usually tragic for one screen star to marry another in the same profession. The electric spark struck out by the contact of two nervous temperaments hardly makes a good basis for peaceful domesticity.

* * *

A movie actress should choose a stolid, even-tempered business man, or a level-headed, understanding doctor or lawyer, or even a husky, phlegmatic athlete for her mate. And an excitable movie actor should pick his "million-dollar baby" from the ten-cent store. Or he should marry a trained nurse with cast-iron nerves and imperturbable good-nature.

Of course, it's no fun to try to live with a bundle of nerves, vanity and temperament. But, after all, if one pa tv to a union contributes most of the color, glamour and romance, the other party may have to supply all the patience and common sense—and lots of unselfishness. Fifty-fifty!

* * *

"Fits of rage" aren't always rage at YOU. They are oftener just blow-outs of nervous tension. A prima donna may throw the vase or the lamp at her husband's head, just because he happens to be conveniently near, when she wants to murder her manager or her publicity agent or her leading man. And a movie star may tear up the livingroom furniture, just because he can't get his hands on some dramatic critic.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Betimes and came to an English edition of "Sleep No More" by Florence Ryerson and Colin Clements and the dedication for a pleasant surprise. Reading "For O. O. McIntyre." So in a herdic to the Casino in the park for breakfast.

Working and with my wife to Lincoln Square for passport pictures and down-town for visas. Then to sit with Bob and Pat Brinkeroff away all summer on their own island in Maine. Also a moment at Roxy's in the Majestic on the site of which I lived many years.

Home and Valerie Edwards for dinner, telling with great charm of the long days when she was a London Gaiety Girl. Afterward walking to a book-stall and picked a book telling about the incredible filth of Paris cafes. Yet at midnight ate heartily from an ice box.

A man employing many butlers tells me that while few he hired drank, any number "lay on the hip," the jargon for smoking opium. Contrary to most narcotic addicts, the opium users are meticulous about their work and dress. But there's one giveaway. After a session at the pipe, they cannot refrain from hiccuping at the sight of food. A tough indulgence for a butler.

* * *

Outside Harlem, the "reefer" cigaret, a variant of the loco weed that produces an effect similar to hashish, is used chiefly by professional musicians, especially those attached to dance orchestras. Almost every band has one or two.

Joel Sayre, author of Rackety-Rax and Hizzoner the Mayor, is the heaviest built New York writer with possible exceptions of Charles Francis Coe and Willem Hendrik Van Loon. Sayre, at the moment turning out a sports column for a Boston paper, can not only tear a telephone book apart, and toss off six litres of beer at one standing, but can double a half dollar between thumb and index finger.

In the most self-conscious of cities, I think the most self-conscious type and perhaps the most forlorn is a door boy at a pert botique on upper Fifth avenue. He is tricked out in complete Eton suit with a top hat, trousers ruled like ledgers, and a monkey jacket. It would be fun to see George Arliss so rigged up. And I've always ached to see Elihu Root in kilts.

Under sartorial leadership, by the way of such flossy fashionists as Noel Coward, Douglas Fairbanks and the Prince of Wales checks and pronounced plaids of the 90's enjoy revival. Irving Berlin is reported to have ventured forth in natty checks recently, in contrast to his usual sedate style.

Oliver LaFarge, author of "Laughing Boy," wears a heavy silver bracelet, the gift of an Indian chief . . . John Lodge, grandson of Henry Cabot Lodge, has appeared in four Hollywood films recently . . . Sherry's is now serving a $1.50 dinner . . . Cy Nast, son of the cartoonist, is a daily luncher at The players . . . Newport's favorite actor this summer was Harry Ellerbe, who fluttered hearts of the butlered bon-ton.

There is, I am told, a small army of martyrs who call themselves "The Widows of Morning Newspapermen." They meet once a month at a mid-town restaurant to commiserate. They are the patient souls who put out slippers and cold snack every night before retiring perhaps to dream they had married merchant princes or radio crooners instead of eternal nighthawks. They are Park Row Wives! One of their stock stories is of a group of children babbling: "Mumsey, who is that man who comes here to sleep!"

And it was Stanley Walker, a night city editor, who classed cirrhosis of the liver as an occupational disease.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Someone thought all movies should be "made fit for the innocent little children."

We doubted it. We're strong for innocent children. We're mad about Mickey Mouse. And we're personally completely fed up with these deshabille dames who hover on the brink of ruin for 17 reels and then Go Moral when there's nothing else to do.

But does that mean that all adult entertainment should be denatured to the level of 10 years old comprehension and experience? We couldn't see it.

Things Baby Bessie shouldn't see or read. Of course there are—oodles of 'em. All of Shakespeare's plays, for example; most of the Old Testament, and practically every great modern drama. But what of it? Since when did theaters become nurseries?

Why shouldn't parents attend to their job, instead of wishing it on the neighborhood movie? We asked you. And here's an answer which we hand on with wild whoops of indorsement.

Dear Miss Robinson—

This talk about "doing something about unfit movies" gives me a chance I've been waiting for. How about doing something about the "unfit parents" who send their children out to amuse themselves as they see fit because they are too lazy, too restless, to train them in the homes?

A juvenile crime wave? I'll say there is! And we're putting the blame for it on every agency but the right one, which is — THE PARENTS.

Thirty years ago if you started a family you knew you were tackling a regular job. Maybe you didn't like that job. Newly married couples were just as young then as they are now. They liked their own freedom and fun just as much as these modern newlyweds do. It bored them just as badly to stay at home and take care of little Junior. But they knew that was their duty and they did it. If they didn't—and of course there were always a few who didn't—they were regarded by the rest of the world as tramps.

But these modern newlyweds don't expect to give up a particle of their fun and freedom when they marry. If the average modern wife has to stay in every night with her baby she thinks she's terribly abused, and so do most of her neighbors. And as soon as she can turn her youngster out on the street, away it goes. By this time Dear Mamma is probably having either an affair or a career of her own, or is too busy gadding the streets or playing bridge to be bothered.

And even if the child does stay in the home, what sort of an example does it see? Gin swilling—gambling — idiotic, wise-cracking parents trying to act like collegiates. No dignity. No home life. A mother who thinks of nothing but keeping young. A father who thinks of nothing but making money.

No wonder we have a crime wave! Most of our young people are growing up without any discipline or decent standards. "Get it while the getting's good"—that's their motto. While mamma calls up the bootlegger over the telephone, they play gangster in the nearest alley. Why not?

Of course, they aren't all like that. There are fine parents, too, and splendid homes. But they aren't in the majority any more. The general average gets lower every year.

INDICT THE PARENTS! That's what I say.

EVERY TIME A MINOR IS ARRESTED FOR A MISDEMEANOR—ARREST THE PARENTS TOO FOR CONTRIBUTING TO HIS DELINQUENCY.

AND PERHAPS IT MIGHT BE JUST AS WELL ALSO TO ARREST ALL THE REST OF US WHO CONDONE THE LAZINESS AND SILLINESS OF SUCH PARENTS!

Clean up the movies? By all means. BUT FIRST OF ALL—CLEAN UP THE HOMES!

A DISGUSTED FATHER.

Yes? And now YOU say ——?

The Human Side of the News

The Splendid Work Done by the United States Coast Guards—Heroism Is Part of Their Day's Work

By EDWIN C. HILL

SHUDDERING, lifting to the thrust of the sea like a frightened thing, the ship strains at the cable that runs far out to where her anchor clutches at the bottom, groping like a hand for a place to cling. The sea tears at her and tosses her like a toy at the end of that all too slender rope.

On deck, a little group of men are huddled together, their clothing frozen on them. Cold has dazed their brains, clutched at their hearts. Dully to their ears comes the hollow boom of an angry surf tearing at the sandy hillocks of Cape Cod. They are alone in the center of a pitiless world of snarling sea. With every crashing impact the ship shudders and groans. The men know she cannot last long; but they can do nothing; too tired to try, too numbed to care.

And then, against the line of the beach, a little light appears, glows brightly for a moment, and then goes out. Another flash, and the men turn to one another with hope in their eyes. And then a speck comes dancing over the high waves, a speck that lifts high upon a white crest and then is engulfed by the sea. Nearer and nearer it comes, fighting forward stubbornly against the fury of the waves, and soon the huddled group on deck spy the tiny craft coming to the rescue.

5,214 Lives Saved By Coast Guard

IT reaches the ship and hovers to the leeside, to get whatever shelter there is for the work of rescue. And the crew of the wrecked ship let go and slide down one by one, to be plucked from the waters by strong arms.

Next day the newspapers briefly record another dramatic rescue at sea by the United States Coast Guards.

Five thousand two hundred and fourteen is the total of lives rescued from peril during the past years by these American heroes. Their work is done quietly. Their men never boast; they are much too busy. Their reports of deeds done at sea or upon the pounded sands are coldly restrained. Yet they are heroes, every one of them, and 365 days of the year. Incessantly along 13,000 miles of coasts, trapped with peril, they await the hissing call of the wireless to impending death or disaster.

You will not call them heroes to their faces. Their heroism is so much a part of the day's work that they have no sense of any virtue so glittering, so high sounding. Courage, rising to meet any sudden circumstance of danger, is the muscle of their service spirit. They are so used to courage that they seldom recognize it among each other. Yet every report of their achievements reveals the dauntless spirit that makes them what they are.

Putting aside any consideration of the value of the human lives they save each year, the Coast Guard saves in property alone many times its own cost. It rescues the shipwrecked by the best methods human ingenuity has devised. It feeds and clothes and warms them when it has snatched them from death. By land and by sea it patrols the dangerous coasts for early discovery of wrecks and the hastening of relief, increasing, no man knows how greatly, the chances of rescue and shortening the terrible agony of suspense.

Searches Sea for Ships in Distress

THE Coast Guard searches the sea for distressed vessels and for drifting obstructions, likely at any time to rip the bottom out of a great ship and drown her people. It sends these perils to the bottom of the ocean or drags them to harbor at a cable's end. It goes into the Far North to give to the lonely settlements of Alaskan waters and the Arctic Circle the sure protection that the Northwest Mounted Police gives to the Canadian wilderness; the protection and the simple necessary aids without which Eskimos and whites would find life intolerable.

Unaided, it saves every year hundreds of disabled or stranded vessels with crews and cargoes. It protects wrecked property, after landing, from the ravages of the elements and the rapine of plunderers. It guards the great inland seas and waters, as well, at their dangerous points. It extricates ships unwarily wandering into perilous courses. By its flashing signals of warning, it averts disaster to vessels standing in toward rock or shoals. It constantly fights flood and famine and fire. It is the right arm of the customs in collecting revenue of the government, and it pickets coasts with guards that prevent smuggling.

The tale of the Coast Guard's service is almost endless. It is astounding in variety of accomplishment; for it is Uncle Sam's Emergency service. To the Coast Guard are assigned those desperate and bitter duties that tradition has married to the doughty corps. Go with them upon their appointed tasks and you will find them saving life in utter defiance of storm and cold, ridding the seas of pirates, spreading order and cleanliness, doctoring the sick and burying the dead. It even preaches the gospel and reads the marriage ceremony in regions where missionaries cannot always go.

Officers and men are sailors, policemen, firemen, doctors, magistrates, ministers all in one, their opportunities expanding in different parts of our vast American domain. You will read more than once this coming winter a news dispatch by wireless, flashing in from some section of the storm-swept sea the report of a ship disabled, followed by these words: "A United States Coast Guard cutter is standing by."

And all who read know that whatever man can do to stave off death and mitigate suffering will be done by the cutter's men. Every man aboard that cutter will stake his life in the chances of the game without the hesitation of an in-drawn breath.

The annals of the Atlantic carry many tales of such undismayed accomplishment. But they are tales only half told. They seldom take into balanced account the actual deeds of the Coast Guard men.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

As the parent of a son or a daughter at college, your experiences are not much different from those of other parents with children at college.

It is a surprise to you that the young folk cannot realize the difference in world financial conditions, even since they entered college.

As seniors the young people feel that they should be allowed more for expenses than they had in former college years.

And more than likely you were too liberal at that time and are feeling the effects of it now.

At the first you were too anxious that they should not be subject to hardships and disappointments and the regrets that you experienced when you were a youngster.

And you went too far the other way.

To them it seems enough — to you, knowing your financial condition, the amount you must spend on them is still prohibitive.

But how can you expect them to understand finances, without experience in earning their way?

To thousands has come the necessity for retrenchment and naturally the objection to it from the young folk — the "babes in the wood."

Democratic primaries, is a brother of Judge Frank P. Patterson. He is a general contractor and has heretofore not been prominent in politics.

Joseph Stack, Republican, is a former soldier and is president of the Lincoln Civic Club. He gives as his platform opposition to political control of the public schools and a reduction in taxes.

Edward O. Tabor, an independent seeking both the Republican and Democratic nomination, is an attorney with a good record in civic matters. He was in charge of Americanization work in Western Pennsylvania during and after the war. He has never before been a candidate for public office.

Robert N. Waddell, Republican, is a former college football coach and has a dynamic personality. He is in the insurance business and bears a good reputation.

Louis Wechsler, Republican, also is an insurance man. He promises if elected to work hard for the application of civil service reform to municipal employes.

Charles Wolff, an entrant in both the Republican and Democratic primaries, is president of the Retail Grocers' Association of Allegheny County and chairman of the Fair Price Committee. He lives on the North Side.

Magee, Tabor, McNutt, Wolff and Waddell have been indorsed by the Citizens' League, which is supporting McArdle for Mayor.

But the wise thing for voters to do is judge the candidates separately and not lump them together in slates. Pittsburgh is more likely to get good government if the aspirants for office are required to undergo individual appraisal of their fitness.
